Senate Votes At 3 Today On Restoring WPA Slash

Backers of Reduced Bill, Seeking Speed, To Let Administration Act 'Out of Order'

By Robert C. Albright.

The Senate late yesterday decided unanimously to bring a swift end to the bitter controversy over deficiency relief estimates with a decisive roll call vote at 3 p. m. today.

With the outcome still teetering in the balance, committee sponsors of the $150,000,000 slash gave Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, permission to offer out of order his amendment for full restoration of the $875,000,000 appropriation.

The agreement gave Administration forces the strategical advantage of a vote on the President's estimates in advance of the committee's "compromise."

Both Claim Advantage

Economy advocates, on the other hand, claimed their side would benefit from an early vote. They privately charge the Administration with "turning on the heat" and with delay tactics designed to afford time for buttonholing Senators in support of an increase.

Although Senate Majority Leader Barkley claimed a "safe" margin of votes for the $875,000,000, Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, floor manager of the bill, claimed the necessary votes for $725,000,000.

Postmster General Farley was a visitor at the Capitol Wednesday, and yesterday was reported in contact with some Senators by telephone. Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan, in charge of Justice Department appointments, also has been a daily Capitol caller.

As debate closed yesterday, Senator Adams dramatically charged WPA workers were being advised in notices posted on WPA bulletin boards to wire their Senators in support of the full appropriation, and said sample telegrams had been posted for their use. Informed that this was being done, Adams said he sent his secretary to WPA headquarters to investigate. He said his secretary found the notices on bulletin boards on two floors of the building.

The Colorado Senator remarked that restrictions against politics in relief and against political influence on WPA workers, evidently "do not operate both ways."

Adams said one sample notice read:

"Spend 25 cents.

"Send a telegram to your Senator today.

"Protest WPA appropriation cuts.

"Protest civil service ban on WPA employes.

"Protect your job."

He said the "specimen telegram" read:

"Senator Alva B. Adams, chairman of Appropriations Committee, Washington, D. C.

"Respectfully urge your support $875,000,000 appropriation and oppose civil service ban on WPA.

(Signed) MARY JONES.
Baltimore, Md."

While Senator Barkley requested a quorum call, Senator McKellar went to the telephone and called

Mercury Expected To Climb; Snow Will Not Last

Snow, which started falling in Washington shortly after dusk was expected to remain just a light flurry, the Weather Bureau said last night.

Chile Speeds Quake Relief; 15,000 Dead

Red Cross Here Sends $10,000; 2 Americans Killed

By the United Press.

Santiago, Chile, Jan. 26.—All government and private resources in Chile were mobilized today to aid the victims of an earthquake zone, 300 miles south of here, as the officially estimated death toll mounted to nearly 15,000.

Private estimates indicated the number of deaths might reach 20,000 with double that number injured or missing.

The State Department in Washington tonight said it had been advised by the American Ambassador to Chile, Norman Armour, that two Americans were killed and four others injured, one perhaps fatally, in the Chilean earthquake.

Armour told the department he obtained his information from the Duncan Fox Co., at Talcahuano, in the temblor area, which said the victims were members of the Courtlandt Swet family of Kentucky.

Two Americans Killed

He listed Michael Swet, a son, and Courtlandt's mother-in-law, named Trumbull, as killed.

Courtlandt Swet suffered slight injuries, and his wife was so critically hurt she was not expected to survive.

Others injured were a son, Jack, and another son whose name was not given.

The State Department could not say in what area in Kentucky the Swets make their home.

Armour's report reached Washington shortly after President Roosevelt, in his second message to Chilean President Aguirre Cerda, notified him a United States Army bombing plane, stationed in Panama, has been ordered to proceed to the stricken area with medical supplies and doctors to aid the earthquake victims.

Roosevelt Pledges Aid

Mr. Roosevelt pledged Cerda all the help "within our power." The message was relayed through the State Department and Armour, who

Amlie Hearing To Be Asked By Senators

Austin Will Demand Action on Appointee Called a Communist

Hearings on President Roosevelt's nomination of Thomas R. Amlie to be a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission will be demanded today at a meeting of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee to consider the appointment.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, chairman of the committee, said the committee would determine procedure on the Amlie nomination. Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, will request a hearing, and Wheeler is understood to favor one.

Appointment of the left-wing Wisconsin Progressive to a Republican seat on the commission meanwhile brought sharp criticism on the House floor from Representative Stephen Bolles, Amlie's Republican successor in the House.

Calls Him Revolutionary

Bolles said Amlie, who was assailed as a "Communist" by both houses of the Wisconsin Legislature on Wednesday, favors "revolutionary changes in the Government which would put us on a plane with a Marxian Socialist government did he have his way."

Bolles said Amlie, who has criticized the New Deal, but gone along with it as against "doing nothing," has advocated the following:

11-Story Plunge Kills New York Furniture Chief

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—Screaming "Help, help!" Martin Wortmann, 59, president of Ludwig Baumann & Co., operator of chain furniture stores, plunged 11 stories to his death today through a freight elevator shaft in the company's Fifth avenue shop where the firm's offices are located.

Wortmann was alive when employes drawn by his cries reached him, but he died 30 minutes later in a hospital.

Store officials said Wortmann was making his customary daily tour of inspection of the store when he reached an open door of the elevator shaft. They were unable to say immediately how he came to fall.

City Council Plan Urged For District

Griffenhagen Study Also Favors 1-Man Administrative System Here

By James D. Secrest.

An appointive city council, which will take over some of the minor legislative duties now performed for the District by Congress, will be recommended in the Griffenhagen report now nearing completion, it was learned yesterday.

The size of the council has not been determined, although E. O. Griffenhagen, head of the firm of municipal experts making the study, favors six or seven persons, to be appointed by the President. Some of the members of the House District Committee, however, think the number should be limited to three and that the Commissioners be given the jobs.

Manager Plan Favored

The council would supervise the work of the single administrator, previously forecast, who would have duties similar to that of a city manager whether or not he is given that title.

The report also will recommend that the multiple agencies of the District government, including independent boards, be consolidated under 17 department heads, it was learned. An official responsible to the city manager will govern each of these departments under the plan being drafted.

Griffenhagen has outlined his plan for replacing the commission form of government with several members of the House District Committee and while still subject to change, it is understood to have the approval of the members who will have the job of selling the idea to Congress.

Griffenhagen yesterday discussed various phases of the report with the District Commissioners, the Budget Bureau and Representatives Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia; Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, and Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi.

The problem of altering the District's 1940 budget to conform with the governmental reorganization plan was discussed at the latter conference, but it is understood that it was agreed that no changes may be made in the District supply bill until after the governmental reforms are effected by legislative enactment.

Group Meets in March

As the House sub-committee on District appropriations will not take up the local budget until some time in March, however, members of the House District Committee hope to obtain Congressional approval of the major reforms before the appropriations are made.

The idea of relieving Congress of the task of passing upon trivial legislation, such as laying pipe lines, closing streets and the like has been urged in every study of local government reorganization. While some progress has been made, the time of the District committees and Congress still is taken to authorize acts which most cities perform without resort to legislation.

Members of the city council, under the Griffenhagen plan, will be paid only part-time. Their jobs, likewise, will not be full-time as are those of the present Commissioners.

Brazil Frustrates Fascist Plot to Seize Sao Paulo

Sao Paulo, Brazil, Jan. 26 (U.P.).—A Fascist plot to seize the state government of Sao Paulo as the first step in a nation-wide revolt against President Getulio Vargas, has been frustrated with the arrest of Plinio Salgado, leader of the outlawed Integral Action, it was announced today.

Police said Salgado, in hiding since the unsuccessful "Green Shirt" uprising last May 11, his brother, Henrique, and his son-in-law, Jose Loureiro, were arrested by a single detective at 1 a. m. in the aristocratic "Jardim America" district here.

Documents found in Salgado's possession, authorities said, showed he was organizing a revolt with the aid of agents who, disguised as traveling men, journeyed throughout the state.

Insurgents, Pursuing Disorganized Loyalists, Approach Granollers, Vital Rail Center on Lines to Border

By the United Press.

Barcelona, Jan. 26.—Generalissimo Francisco Franco's nationalists legions today occupied this greatest city of Spain without firing a shot and received a tumultuous welcome from 1,500,000 half-starved people who greeted them in the streets with blaring bands and shouts of "viva Franco!"

Old women, tears streaming down their wrinkled cheeks, knelt in the shell-pitted streets and kissed the hands of Franco's conquering Navarrese, black-shirted Italian legionnaires and bearded Moors from Africa.

Men, women and children, some crying and others laughing in their hysteria, crowded around military trucks to catch white bread tossed to them by soldiers.

Franco's Greatest Triumph

Catalonian senoritas threw their arms around Franco's soldiers and swung arm-in-arm with them down the broad Ramblas.

It was Franco's greatest triumph of the 30-month-old civil war. It culminated one of the greatest military offenses of modern times—the conquest of 15,000 square miles of territory and 500 cities, towns and villages in 35 days.

Tonight "El Caudillo," as Franco is known, was the master of three-fourths of Spain and about 20,000,000 of her 24,000,000 people.

The loyalist defenders of Barcelona were in disorderly retreat to the north and Franco's commanders had no intention of resting on their victory.

Crack divisions of Galicians and Navarrese pushed on northward beyond Badalona on the coast and above Sabadell to rout the scattered remnants of the government's Catalonian army—probably about 200,000 men—before they can organize new lines for the defense of northern Barcelona Province and the 24,300 square miles of Gerona Province.

New Battle Near

Late tonight Franco's Navarrese and legionnaires, aided by his Maestrazgo army corps operating farther north, were moving under forced marches upon Granollers, a vital communications center 12 miles north of Barcelona, where the next battle of Catalonia may be fought.

Granollers, about 40 miles south of the new loyalist capital at Gerona, is a key to the railroads and highways leading to the French border.

Important military headquarters in Barcelona announced the town of Sabadell, 7 miles outside the city on the north, was completely encircled by Navarrese who drove eastward from Tarrasa and crossed

Father Paces Aisle of Bus As Baby Is Born on Va. Road

Life began at 45 miles an hour yesterday in a Greyhound bus bound for the Alexandria, Va., Hospital as Mrs. Milton Hermes, of Brooklyn, N. Y., gave birth to a 6-pound baby boy, while her husband paced the aisle of the vehicle, wringing his hands.

Two women passengers assisted at the delivery. Claude W. Blythe, driver, had his first intimation of the arrival when the child loosed a healthy squeal from the back of the bus.

Blythe had been advised to head for the Alexandria Hospital by a Triangle, Va., physician who said he lacked proper facilities to care for the mother and believed the event would not take place for several hours.

On U. S. 1, between Triangle and Woodridge, Va., Blythe found his 21 passengers of two schools of thought. The husband was behaving "like any other expectant father," he reported, "and kept asking me to hurry to the hospital."

The two women passengers who volunteered as midwives "wanted me to get to a telephone, but demanded that the bus be kept moving," Blythe said. "I got worried and stopped two or three times, but every time they got more excited in their demands that I drive on. When I heard the baby cry I felt sure everything was all right."

Dr. Benjamin F. Phillips, of Triangle, hastily summoned to the bus when it stopped at Woodbridge with the extra passenger, confirmed Blythe's opinion that everything was all right. The amateur midwives had performed "admirably," he said.

An ambulance from the Hall funeral home at Lorton took the mother and child to the Alexandria Hospital, where they were reported doing nicely last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Hermes were en route from Florida to Brooklyn.

Navy Planning 11 New Bases, To Start Now

Program Includes Work at 8 Other Key Points, Says Spokesman

The Navy plans to establish 11 new naval bases and complete facilities at eight other key points by the time the fleet is built to full strength nine years hence, a spokesman said yesterday.

Annual programs similar to the plan now before the House Naval Committee will be presented with the hope that the entire base development program may be completed at the same time as the ten-year ship expansion schedule approved last year. This revelation followed a recommendation of the House committee by a naval officer that the whole plan, embodying fortification of Guam and a chain of other bases in the Atlantic and Pacific, be started at once.

Rear Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, chairman of the special naval board which recommended the immediate establishment of an air and submarine base at Guam and a score of other bases, indorsed the bill before the committee to initiate the program and advised that the entire plan be started as soon as possible. The provision in the bill for development of Guam, confined to harbor improvement and aviation shore facilities, has been the storm-center of the measure since it was indorsed some days ago by President Roosevelt.

While the President emphasized that his approval of the bill did not extend to the full proposal for fortification of the island, naval officials have given it their personal indorsement. Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations in his testimony, said the Navy had "no recommendation at present" to fortify Guam, but admitted that

Bonnet Tells Chamber Britain Supports Moves; Paris 'In Constant Contact' With Moscow and Warsaw Over Crisis

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 26.—France announced agreement with Britain today on "necessary" steps to keep Italy from using insurgent Spain as a stepping stone to Mediterranean supremacy while Premier Mussolini was proclaiming the fall of Barcelona as "another chapter of the new Europe we are creating."

Voicing official fears in both France and Britain at the implications of the insurgent conquest of Barcelona, French Foreign Minister George Bonnet warned the Chamber of Deputies that the French-Italian dispute over colonial territory soon may become "a question of force."

He declared France had the solid support of Britain in resisting Italian claims for part of the French colonial empire. The Chamber voted its confidence in the government's foreign policy of refusing concessions to Italy.

Necessary Measures Taken

Backing up Bonnet's announcement, Premier Edouard Daladier told deputies of his own Radical-Socialist party in Paris that "in agreement with Britain we have taken necessary measures in the Mediterranean.

"It is characteristic that British and French warships are now cruising in the Mediterranean along the coast of Spanish Morocco as well as near the Balearic Islands," Daladier said.

The premier also declared French-Italian differences were "racing toward a climax."

This statement was taken as meant to confirm that the French and British governments planned to occupy the Spanish government island of Minorca and insurgent-held Spanish Morocco if Premier Mussolini did not fulfill his promise of withdrawal of Italian forces from Spain at the war's end.

The Chamber responded with three separate votes considered votes of confidence in the government.

Second Vote Unanimous

On the first vote the count was 360 to 234, on a Socialist declaration against nonintervention in Spain. The opposition vote was viewed as an internal political gesture by leftists.

The second vote unanimously ratified, 309 to 0, the government's resolution that "the Chamber approves the declaration of the government and has confidence in its vigilance to protect the integrity of the French empire and the security of her imperial communications."

The third vote was 374 to 228 on the government's proposition to end the foreign affairs debate.

The British agreement to support France against any Italian encroachment was understood to have been given in exchange for a French promise to maintain nonintervention in the Spanish war.

The seizure of Spanish Morocco and the Balearic island of Minorca, the latter still in Spanish government hands, has been reported under consideration. Such moves the Italians have declared would be considered provocative by Italy.

Churchill Hears Bonnet

Winston Churchill, Conservative critic of British Prime Minister Chamberlain's appeasement policy, heard Bonnet from the diplomatic gallery in the French Chamber. Churchill has steadily insisted on the danger of the Rome-Berlin axis for Britain and France.

"France has interests to defend in Spain," Bonnet declared. "France and Britain ask nothing of anyone, but they intend to conserve their territories intact.

"France will not tolerate that anyone touch the empire built by the blood and the labor of Frenchmen. France will maintain intact her independence and her territories."

Bonnet said further that France did not intend to "disinterest herself in central Europe.

"We have stayed in constant contact with Russia and Poland," he said, referring to mutual assistance pacts with those nations—pacts which had been considered widely to be non-operative since the French failure to fight for Czecho-Slovakia last September.

Eastern Pacts Still Exist

"There must be an end to the legend that our policy has destroyed engagements we have made in eastern Europe. They still exist and should be carried out in the spirit in which they were contracted."

Mussolini's own words to Fascists cheering under his balcony tonight to celebrate the capture of Barcelona indicated Italy would press claims against France with greater force now that an insurgent victory in the Spanish Civil War seemed more certain.

Referring to the Spanish government slogan "no pasaran!"—they shall not pass—Mussolini said:

"We have passed and I say to you that we will pass."

His speech before a wildly cheering throng was interspersed with shouts of "Tunisia," France's North African protectorate, and "Corsica," French island department in the Mediterranean.

Il Duce's triumphant acclaim for "the new Europe we are creating" increased skepticism in French and British quarters that he would carry out a promise to Prime Minister Chamberlain to withdraw his forces from Spain as soon as the war is ended.

Many believed he would offer to quit Spain only after a colonial settlement with France.

Some of Rome's celebrating Fascists marched to the Spanish Em-

9 a. m. To breakfast at the Willard, through the swarming thousands of Government clerks who surge across Pennsylvania avenue toward the marble halls after 8:30. Strikebreaking Ban Submitted To Congress

LaFollette Committee Places Onus of Labor Evil on Employers

In a severe indictment of "the barbaric methods used in the past to fight strikes," the Senate Civil Liberties Committee yesterday recommended legislation to forbid employers to hire strikebreakers in industrial disputes.

Foreshadowing specific legislation to be proposed to the Senate later this session, the report asserts that "the employer is the key to the strikebreaking problem."

The 200-page document, signed by the committee's two members, Senators LaFollettee, Wisconsin Progressive, and Thomas, Utah Democrat, includes a list of 150 "procriminal record (if any), and the fessional strikebreakers," their agencjes for which they worked.

Placing the onus of the strikebreaking evil upon the employer, the report states that his "responsibility for the persons he pays to take his part in an industrial dispute cannot be denied or evaded." The committee added that it felt "the majority of employers will welcome a prohibition of the utilization of persons to engage in the brutal or deceptive practices of strikebreaking."

"Such a prohibition," the report concluded, "will not in any way affect the right of an employer" to provide watchmen to guard the premises. "It should, however, subject him to penalties for the tactics of agressoin, intimidation, provocation, deception and brutality carried out by irresponsible mercenaries which have cost the Nation so much in human life, suffering, bitterness and misery since 1885."

Details Not Revealed

Although details of the legislation now being drafted were not revealed, it is possbile that proposals will include not only a prohibition on employers engaging strikebreakers but also regulations aimed at the individual strikebreaker.

The report asserted that the Byrnes act of 1936, forbidding transportation of strikebreakers across State lines, has been evaded by the establishment of strikebreaking agencies within the important industrial States.

Listing 35 agencies and employers' associations supplying strikebreakers, strikeguards or "missionaries," the report vigorously condemns such strike services as "an important cause of violence." In addition to the "natural hostility" striking workmen have for these 'industrial mercenaries," the report charges that the strikebearers "have a pecuniary incentive to create and maintain a state of disorder" in the strikes where they serve, especially as they are paid on a daily basis.

The committee found that "in some cases, employers have directed detective agencies to perform acts of violence" to discredit strikers, break their morale or to furnish opportunity for calling in State police.

"No employer who has accepted the principle of collective bargaining in good faith can consider using such persons against his employes," the committe declares.

Asserting that the real purpose of strike services is to destroy unions and colective bargaining, the report states that strikebreakers are usually not qualified workmen, but merely pose as workmen in order to break the strikes; that strike guards are not trained for police duty, but are more often "a specialized kind of ruffian, sometimes a gangster," and that "missionaries," or propagandists, are frequently agents provocateurs, or spies.

First of Series

The report is the first of a series, expected to be published at weekly intervals, covering company police, industrial munitioning, employers' associations, the "Little Steel" strike and industrial espionage.

Commenting on yesterday's report, Senator Burke, Nebraska Democrat, who recently was embroiled in a verbal battle with Chairman Madden, of the National Labor Relations Board, said: "I am heartily in favor of legislation prohibiting employers' use of strikebreakers, but it must be coupled with legislation distinguishing between legal and illegal strikes and protecting those employes who do not want to strike."

Senator Burke said that he would term "illegal" strikes against employers who had complied with the national labor relations act.

The Gallup Poll

Finger Printing of Aliens Favored By Large Majority in Survey

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Jan. 26.—In the wake of the recent trial of German spies in this country, several bills are now pending in Congress to require all aliens living in the United States to be fin gerprinted and registered with the Federal Government.

GALLUP

Sponsored in the Senate by Senator Reynolds, of North Carolina, and in the House by Representative Starnes, of Alabama, this plan meets with widespread popular approval in a national survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion. The majority of voters favor the idea because it "would help to check up on spies," or would enable the Government to "keep a better line on aliens," or because it might deter aliens from engaging in crime or other undercover activities.

A cross-section of voters in all sections and in all income levels was asked: "Do you think all persons living in this country who are not citizens should be fingerprinted and registered with the Federal Government?"

The vote was:

Yes	84%
No	16

Although registration of aliens is widely practiced in foreign countries, including England, the minority of American voters in the survey expressed the view that it would be unfair to "discriminate against a particular class of people" or that fingerprinting would be too expensive and would call for "too much red tape."

The survey likewise reveals the fact that the majority of voters not only favor fingerprinting of aliens but also think that everybody in the Nation should be fingerprinted.

Many officials of the Federal Bureau of Investigation have long advocated universal fingerprinting as a means of identifying people who are killed in accidents, kidnapped, dogged by impersonators and forgers or who are suffering from amnesia. Many schools and clubs have adopted the practcie and a bill for universal fingerprinting is now pending in the House of Representatives. The basic question has always been, would public opinion stand for this practice?

One indication is seen by the answers to the following question which the institute put to a cross-section of voters: "Do you think everybody in this country should be fingerprinted by the Federal Government?"

The vote was:

Yes	71%
No	29

Senators Reed (Republican), Kansas, and Mead (Democrat), New York, are the only ones so far who have disregarded the custom. Both spoke in debate on confirming Harry Hopkins as Secretary of Commerce.

Veteran Senate attendants, however, said that in recent years "the breach rather than the observance" has been the rule. The other new members, they predicted, won't keep quiet much longer.

Senaotr Capper (Republican), of Kansas, asked Congress yesterday to permit newspapermen to withhold sources of confidential information in testifying before Congressional committees, the Federal courts and grand juries. Similar legislation has been proposed by the Kansan in previous Congresses.

Senator Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, proposed the United States admit without regard to quotas, aged political and religious refugees whose relatives in this country can guarantee their support with a $10,000 bond. He introduced a bill to amend the immigration act.

The amendment would prohibit the refugees from trade here under penalty of forfeiture of the bond, and would deny them citizenship and eligibility for old age pensions.

Rep. Anderson (Democrat), of Missouri, proposed the House create a ten-man committee to investigate the personnel of the National Labor Relations Board and recommend changes in the board and the Wagner labor act.

He said the purpose of his resolution was to "produce harmony in industrial relations."

The National Coal Association announced it filed a protest against giving the Tennessee Valley Authority money to start additional hydroelectric dams.

The protest was filed with a House Appropriations sub-committee hearing TVA's budget estimate for the next fiscal year.

The announcement said John D. Battle, executive secretary of the association, told the committee construction of three proposed dams would result "in further displacement of coal," and "further cripple the coal industry in the Tennessee Valley area," while adding to unemployment.

Bill Introduced Delaying Filipino Trade Freedom

Congress received yesterday legislation to postpone granting full economic independence to the Philippines for approximately 15 years after they attain political independence, now scheduled for 1946.

The proposed amendments to the Philippine independence act were offered by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, and Chairman Kocialkowski (Democrat), of Illinois, of the House Insular Affairs Committee.

Tydings said he introduced the bill at the request of the Philippine-American independence committee, which drafted it.

The amendments would provide for stepping up tarils 5 per cent annually against Philippine products entering the United States and American products entering the Philippines for 15 years beginning in 1946.

Labor Board Rules Against A.F.L. in Dispute With C.I.O.

The National Labor Relations Board, which has been attacked by the American Federation of Labor for abrogating contracts in several cases where A. F. of L. right to speak for employes was challenged, upheld yesterday a contract of the rival Congress of Industrial Organizations and rejected and A. F. of L. petition for an employes' election.

The board's decision, rendered in a two to one split, involved the Long Island City (N.Y.) plant of the National Sugar Refining Co. of New Jersey. A sugar refinery workers' local of the International Longshoremen's Association, an A. F. of L. union, made the request for an employes' election to determine the proper bargaining agency for the workers. At present a contract exists between the company and the C. I. O. United Sugar Workers Local Industrial Union, No. 580.

Joining with Chairman J. Warren Madden in dismissing the petition, was Donald Wakefield Smith, whose reappointment to the N.L. R. B. is opposed by the A. F. of L. Edwin S. Smith, who also has been under A. F. of L. fire occasionally, took the minority position in favor of the latter's petition.

Thomas Appoints Taft Counsel Against Martin

R. J. Thomas, recognized by the C. I. O. as president of the United Automobile Workers of Amerira, announied yesterday the appointment of Charles Taft, of Cincinnati, as counsel in the case brought by the U. A. W. to restrain Homer Martin, ousted executor, from interference in the affairs of the union. Martin still claims the presidency.

Taft is a brother of Robert A. Taft, Republican Senator from Ohio.

Charles Taft has been counsel for many years in Cincinnati for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Two years ago he was a member of the impartial mediation board appointed by President Roosevelt during the C. I. O. strike in Little Steel.

Hines Loses Plea For Dismissal

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—A defense move for dimissal of the conspiracy count in the policy racket indictment against James J. Hines failed today, and both sides in the second trial of the veteran Tammany District boss outlined their cases before the jury. All 12 other counts were based on the conspiracy charge.

Senate Asked To Double FHA Lending Power

Wagner Bill Would Continue Insuring of Existing Construction

A proposal to double the amount of insured mortgages the Federal Housing Administration is authorized to have outstanding at any one time was presented to the Senate yesterday by Senator Wagner, New York Democrat and chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee.

A similar bill, which would raise the total mortgages the FHA is permitted to insure from $3,000,000,000 to $6,000,000,000, was introduced in the House Wednesday by Chairman Steagall of the House Banking and Currency Committee, co-author with Senator Wagner of the national housing act establishing the FHA.

Would Lift Restriction

The proposals, which take the form of an amendment to the housing act, would also permit FHA to continue its present power to insure mortgages on existing construction. According to the act as it now stands, new FHA coverage would be restricted after July 1, 1939, to houses constructed since January 1, 1937.

The amendments would also continue indefinitely the 25-year term for insurance of mortgages on houses costing less than $6,000, a provision, which Representative Steagall has described as "one of the principal advantages which has led to the increased construction of small homes." Unless this amendment is enacted, the FHA after July 1 will be required to reduce the term to 20 years.

Under the original act, the FHA was limited to $2,000,000,000 in its mortgage-insurance operations, with a proviso giving the President authority to extend this figure to $3,000,000,000. In answer to a request from Stewart McDonald, FHA administrator, President Roosevelt ordered the $1,000,000,000 increase last December.

Asserting he was in favor of strengthening and extending the FHA as far as possible, Representative Steagall said: "It is thought that if the Federal Housing Administration continues at its present pace, it is possible that the $3,000,000,000 authorization which it now has will be either used up or so nearly used by July, 1940, that its operations will be either discontinued or seriously embarrassed."

Property Depreciation

The veteran Alabama housing expert added that one of the "vital reasons" for removing some of the present restrictions of FHA is that "if the advantages of the long term, high percentage, low interest rate insured mortgage is taken away from existing properties, the value of those properties immediately will be depreciated and they would drift back again into the old type of mortgage bearing 6, 7 and 8 per cent."

Furthermore, he said, "it will not be possible to dispose of new houses if the value of the old houses is thus depreciated and their sale made more difficult."

Steagall said the bill did not include all the amendments he would like to see adopted. One of these is extension beyond June 30 of Title I, of the housing act, which permits the FHA to insure banks against losses on property improvement loans.

Fidelity Firm Solvent, Says Investigator

Federal Judge Advised To Dismiss Investors' Bankruptcy Case

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 26 (AP).—Special Master Charles P. Mead told Federal Judge William E. Baker today the Fidelity Investment Association, investment loan firm with offices in 58 cities, was solvent and urged him to dismiss a receivership petition filed by nine investment contract purchasers.

Judge Baker indicated he probably would give his decision within a week.

Mead said a ten-day investigation by auditors and opposing counsel showed the firm's finances were sound.

The petition was filed by Pennsylvania purchasers of the association's contracts lest December 19 after the Securities Exchange Commission cited the 28-year-old firm for fraudulent practices. The association denied the charges, agreed to an injunction to prohibit the practices.

2 States, D. C. Plan Drive On Numbers

Committee of 13 Officials to Meet On February 15

A drive against numbers racketeers will be planned by a committee of 13, including police and legal officials of Maryland, Virginia and the District, at a conference on February 15.

Commissioner Hazen said yesterday he had invited the officials to the initial meeting to combat lawbreakers who have found it to their advantage to center operations across the Maryland line.

Recently Prince Georges County authorities began a campaign of their own to drive out the racketeers.

The 13 are Hazen, Lieut. Col. David McCoach, jr., engineer commissioner; Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; William C. Walsh, attorney general of Maryland; Abram P. Staples, attorney general of Virginia; Benjamin G. Wilkinson, jr., State's attorney of Montgomery County; Winship Wheatley, jr., State's attorney for Prince Georges County; Paul Brown, Commonwealth attorney of Fairfax County; Lawrence W. Douglas, Commonwealth attorney of Arlington County; Judge John P. McMahon of the District Police Court; United States District Attorney David A. Pine and John P. Colpoys, United States marshal.

Commissioner Hazen said they also would discuss a plan whereby a nonresident, arrested for a traffic violation, would be permitted to post his driving permit in lieu of collateral.

This proposal has been indorsed by officials of Maryland and Virginia and Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

Splawn Asks ICC Regulate All Carriers

By the Associated Press.

W. M. W. Splawn, Interstate Commerce Commissioner, said yesterday a functional reorganization of the ICC and extension of its authority to all interstate shipments would go far toward eliminating "cutthroat competition" among transporation agencies.

Testifying in support of a general transportation bill, Splawn told the House Interstate Commerce Committee that all freight and passenger rates were being driven downward by unregulated competition.

"These fights must be under rules," he declared. "Under this bill, we don't look toward elimination of competition. There'll be plenty of that left, but it will be under rules.

"We would be able to say, fight for the traffic, but don't hit below the belt. The ICC would be the umpire."

In reply to a question from Representative Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, Splawn said it was difficult to say whether railroads of trucking firms were "more prone" to cutting prices below cost.

Although the bill calls for the ICC to be expanded from 11 to 19 members, Splawn expressed the opinion a functional reorganization—into rate, finance ad appeals sections—could be accomplished with the prtset 11 mtmbers, "or even 10."

Miss Johnson's Rites Set Today

Funeral services for Miss Charlotte Johnston, retired postoffice employe, will be held at 2 p. m. today at Wheeling, W. Va., the Rev. R. E. L. Strider, Bishop of West Virginia, officiating. Services were conducted in Washington yesterday at the Hysong funeral home, Thirteenth and N streets northwest, by the Rev. Charles T. Warner, of St. Alban's Episcopal Church.

Miss Johnston died Wednesday at her home, 2240 Massachusetts avenue northwest. She had come to Washington in 1900 and worked in the postoffice until her retirement three years ago.

She was a member of Mary Washington Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution; the Juvenile Society of Washington and the St. Alban's Episcopal Church.

Mrs. Elliott Rites To Be Held Today

Funeral services will be held today in Minneapolis, Minn., for Mrs. Mary Lancaster Elliott, 85, wife of the late Dr. Llewellyn Elliott, of this city, who died Wednesday.

Mrs. Elliott resided in Washington for many years before the death of her husband.

Two sisters, Mrs. Frank Harrington, of Minneapolis, and Mrs. John Hanway, of Greenville, Miss., and a brother, Spearman Lancaster, of Charles County, former Maryland State Senator, survive.

bassy and cheered the Ambassador of the insurgents, Pedro Garcia Conde, who expressed his thanks from the balcony.

Germans Join Demonstrations

There were large demonstrations in the main sqquares of Milan, Turin, Genoa and Naples.

German workers on a tour of Italy joined the Naples demonstration. Police and firemen guarded the French Consulate.

Alessie Cardinal Ascalesi, archbishop of Naples, celebrated a Te Deum in the Naples cathedral and delivered a sermon praising the Spanish insurgents.

Newspapers, stimulating the fervor with special editions, drew France into the orbit of the celebrations by picturing the Spanish insurgent victory as a major defeat for French policy and a further weakening of France's position in Europe.

Meanwhile there were continued reports of the summoning of additional Italian reserve officer for special military training and it was rumored some of the 60,000 members of the class of 1901 called to the colors yesterday would receive training in Libya, North Africa.

Opportunities for intensification of Italy's campaign to strengthen herself in the Mediterranean at the expense of France will be plentiful in the next two weeks.

Duce Will Review Veterans

On February 1, the sixteenth anniversary of the founding of the Fascist militia, Il Duce is expected to speak when he reviews 40 battalions, including some veterans of the Spanish War.

On February 4, the Fascist grand council, through which Mussolini usually announces his programs, will meet.

Then on February 6 the supreme commission of defense will meet.

From Warsaw came indications Germany was preparing to link her own colonial demands with Italy's in a joint threat against Britain and France.

Germany and Poland were reported to have drafted a joint proposal for an international colonial redistribution conference as a step toward satisfying their expansionist aims.

Confer at Downing Street

Neutrality orsupport from Poland wuold serve to protect Germany on the east while she backed Italian demands in the west.

Ambassadors of both government Spain and France conferred at the British foreign office over implications of the Spanish insurgent victory.

Pablo de Azcaratey Florez, the Spanish envoy, was understood to have asked Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax again for reconsideration of the British government's refusal to sell arms to the Spanish government, and for aid to refugees fleeing before the advancing insurgent armies.

Destroyers Arrive at Corsica

Naval orders showed that four French destroyers had arrived at Corsican ports.

Five other destroyers were anchored at French Moroccan ports, near Spanish Morocco.

French Government bonds continued their steady fall on the Paris bourse. Three per cents dropped from 81.40 to 80.90 and ohters lost in proportion. The downward movement had been under way since the offensive against Barcelona gained momentum.

The high bid for the $195,000 public improvement and funding bonds of the City of Alexandria, bearing 3 per cent interest, was $205,392.20, submitted by Eastbrook & Co., New York, and F. W. Craigie & Co., Richmond, which is $10,392.20 above par value. The bid was accepted by city council last night at a meeting recessed from Tuesday night.

Seven bids submitted by bond firms were opened at noon by City Manager Carl L. Budwesky.

The other six were Mason Hagan, Richmond, $203,133.45; Halsey Stuart & Co., New York, $203,771.10; R. S. Dixon & Co., Richmond, $201,910.50; First Michigan Corporation, New York, and Burr & Co., Inc., Washington, $201,649.50; Freddie Nolting, Richmond, and S. B. S. Van Ingen, Inc., New York, $198,515.85, and Citizens National Bank of Alexandria, $196,797.21.

Budwesky opened the bids in the presence of Mayor Richard L. Ruffner, Councilman A. Slater Lamond, City Treasurer Roger C. Sullivan and City Engineer H. G. McCartney.

Miss Nevett Dies

Miss M. Angela Nevett, for 56 years identified with the public school system of Alexandria, died yesterday at her home, 204 North Columbus street. She suffered a stroke January 16. She is survived by two sisters, Miss Julia Blake Nevett and Miss Nannie Nevett.

The funeral will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the home, with burial in St. Mary's Cemetery. The services will be conducted by the Very Rev. Thomas A. Rankin, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church.

Miss Nevett was born in Alexandria and educated at St. Mary's Academy. She was appointed a teacher in the public schools October 15, 1883, and retired at the close of the session in June, 1936. She was then employed in the book distribution system of the school, with offices in the Jefferson School annex, until her illness. She was principal of Washington School from 1916 to 1936.

Legion Arranges Ball

Alexandria post, American Legion, John E. Minnigh, commander, will stage the second birthnight ball February 22, in Gadsby's Tavern, the scene of the ball in honor of the birthday of Gen. George Washington, in 1799. The tavern is now owned by the legion post.

F. Clinton Knight, a past commander of the post and a past department of Virginia commander, is general chairman. He will be assisted by a committee of 75 members, among them Commander Minnigh and Past Commanders George H. Evans, W. Cameron Roberts, W. Milton Glasgow, John S. Arnold, Hannon E. Norris, Harry N. Jones, Herbert A. Cady, George W. Downham, G. Raymond King, Elliott F. Hoffman, John A. Nugent, Everett A. Hellmuth and Sidney Weil.

To Entertain Class

Mothers of seventh grade pupils in Mount Vernon School who will graduate this semester will entertain from 2 to 4 p. m. Monday, at the school, in honor of the graduating class. There will be 75 boys and girls in the group.

The committee is planning a program of entertainment and all seventh grade pupils' mothers are invited to attend.

A committee meeting will be held today at 10:30 a. m. in the George Mason Hotel in preparation for the World Day of Prayer.

The Young Peoples' organization will hold a meeting at 3 p. m. Sunday in St. Paul's Episcopal Church to prepare a program and will be assisted by Mrs. Ryland T. Dodge and Mrs. George T. Klipstein.

The Children's division will meet Monday at 2:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. William M. Reardon, 805 Prince street. Miss Ellen Smith and Miss Irene Dodge are in charge of this group.

'Silent' Drive Conducted by Sasscer, Love

Election a Week Away, Neither Has Made A Speech

By the Associated Press.

Upper Marlboro, Md., Jan. 26.—Only one week remains before the special election for United States Representative from southern Maryland, but neither the Republican nor Democratic nominees has made a speech since the campaign began.

Lansdale G. Sasscer, former State Senate president, who unsuccessfully campaigned last year for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, said today his speechless campaign was decided upon when voters were found apathetic to heated oratorical efforts so soon after the November orgy of political speechmaking.

A. Kingsley Love, Leonardtown attorney and Republican nominee, said he also was refraining from political rallies. Like Sasscer, Love made numerous speeches during his campaign against Stephen W. Gambrill, who sought reelection to the Fifth Congressional seat as a Democrat.

Gambrill died a few weeks after he defeated Love, thereby making necessary the special election on February 3.

Both candidats asserted they were urging their friends and county political leaders to "get the vote out."

Sasscer said the absence of a local issue had further decided him upon the quiet campaign.

Love said he had "just returned from a trip to see friends and political leaders in La Plata, Upper Marlboro, Annapolis and Baltimore."

Planes Rush Vaccines to Quake Area

American Red Cross Also Dispatches $10,000 To Aid Chile Disaster

The American Red Cross last night arranged to dispatch a quantity of vaccines and serums in charge of one of its representatives, by Army plane from the Canal Zone, for relief of victims of the Chilean earthquake.

George E. Smith, Red Cross representative at Balboa, Canal Zone, Panama, was instructed by telephone to purchase in the Canal Zone a quantity of vaccines and serums and also powdered milk to be loaded on the Army plane made available by order of the Secretary of War. Smith will deliver the supplies to the Chilean Red Cross as a special representative of the American Red Cross.

A second consignment of medicines was sent from Philadelphia last night by train to Miami where it will be transshipped by by Pan-American Airlines tomorrow for Chile. Free transportation was given the Red Cross by Pan-American.

The consignments of medicines were ample to protect 25,000 or more people from disease or death from injuries. The shipments contained typhoid vaccine, tetanus antitoxin, tetanus gas grene and glucose. The powdered milk was for homeless infants and children.

Earlier in the day Chairman Norman H. Davis of the American Red Cross sent $10,000 in cash through the State Department to American Ambassador Norman Armour to be given to the Chilean Red Cross. In reply to a message of sympathy and offer of help sent yesterday by Mr. Davis, the Chilean Red Cross cabled: "Deepest gratitude for your generous offer. For greatest speed and efficiency we would accept financial aid to buy necessities for our people."

Mrs. Lucy Higgins To Be Buried at Arlington Toda

was to deliver it to the Chilean president.

President Roosevelt said that in addition to the plane, which will leave its base tonight with serums, powdered milk and a Red Cross field director, the Red Cross also had arranged for additional shipments of serums by a Pan-American transport plane leaving Miami Saturday.

Mr. Roosevelt called attention to the initial $10,000 cabled to the Chilean Red Cross by Chairman Norman H. Davis of the American organization.

The decision to ship the serum from Panama came after Armour reported there was an acute need for serum to combat gangrene and typhoid. He emphasized that concentrated food and clothing also were needed badly.

Six additional planes, some at the Canal Zone and the others at Langley Field, Va., are prepared to join the Chilean expedition if necessary, the Army informed Mr. Roosevelt.

The President cabled another message to Cerda earlier today, expressing sympathy for the earthquake victims, and offering whatever assistance Cerda deemed necessary.

An Argentine offer of aid also was accepted by President Cerda. The Buenos Aires government was asked to send antitetanus serums and condensed milk.

Other nearby republics also offered assistance.

20,000 Are Homeless

An earlier report by Armour said that official estimates placed the dead at about 10,000, with 8,000 dead in the city of Chillan alone. He said officials estimated the homeless or injured at 20,000.

The Civil Aeronautics Authority joined the relief work indirectly when it temporarily suspended regulations requiring a seat for every plane passengers, thus enabling Pan-American Grace Airway to speed removal of women and children from the disaster zone.

The airline operates between the United States and Latin America. Planes already in Chile were pressed into emergency relief service. It was believed the CAA's action would permit the transports to carry 28 passengers instead of the usual 14.

Freight and passenger ships at Valparaiso were pressed into service to transport foodstuffs and medical supplies sorely needed in the stricken area. Special trains found their journeys to the south halted by track ripped from the roadbed when the quake leveled the region at midnight Tuesday.

Military and private planes were the only means of transportation to reach the devastated area itself, but their facilities were limited to a few doctors, nurses and necessary medical and hospital equipment.

The government appropriated 350,000 pesos ($25,000) for immediate use in feeding the homeless, while the army and navy provided cots and tents to shelter the victims.

Additional appropriations were expected, while suggestions were made that a "forced loan" be raised and that all employes, both public and private, donate a week's salary to a relief fund.

President Cerda, who went as far south as Linares by train, but was obliged to turn back to Santiago because of disrupted communications, ordered the bed of the Maule Irrigation Canal restored as soon as possible to avoid loss of the rice crop through lack of water.

If the crop were lost, famine might set in, adding to the victims' misery.

Sanitary authorities adopted strictest measures to prevent outbreak of epidemics.

A considerable area of the region shaken by the quake was laid waste. Several small towns were destroyed, while the larger cities—Concepcion, Chillan, Nacimiento and San Rosendo—suffered heavy damage.

Chillan Hit Hardest

Estimates on the deaths, based on official reports to the government from areas contacted, were: Chillan, 5,000; Concepcion, 3,000; Nacimiento, 2,500; San Rosendo, 2,000; Parral, 150; San Carlos, 50; Yungay, 20, and Los Angeles, 13.

Unofficial reports from Cauquenes said the city was destroyed and that 5,000 had been killed.

The towns of San Gregorio, Bulnes, Longavi and Quirihue were said to have been wiped out.

Property damaged was estimated in the hundreds of millions of pesos. The estimate included loss of private and government buildings, damage to communication lines, private homes, crops and livestock.

Rich Farming Belt

The earthquake area, one of the richest agricultural and coal mining regions of the country, presented a scene of tragic and almost unbelievable desolation. Fires still smoldered in the cities, and streets were choked with debris. Chillan and Concepcion were the hardest hit, according to the fragmentary reports reaching here, with the former, a city of 40,000 inhabitants, practically wiped out. Official information said only three houses were left standing in Chillan, while all but one building around the main square collapsed.

Two hundred persons attending a performance in the municipal theater were buried under the building's fallen walls and roof.

Makeshift graves were dug in the city's streets to bury the dead, while first aid stations were set up in tents to attend the injured.

Martial law reigned throughout the area to prevent looting and maintain some semblance of order, and cordons of soldiers and sailors were posted at the northern and southern extremities of the affected zone to keep the curious from getting through to the region and interfering with relief measures.

Franco Pushes Past Barcelona In Loyalist Rout

the River Besos near the Mediterranean coast.

Franco's Urgel army corps, high in the Pyrenees region, also reported a 12-mile advance eastward in a flanking movement against scattered loyalist remnants.

Doubt Serious Resistance

Insurgent commanders said they were convinced the Catalonians had neither the heart nor the means to put up any serious resistance and once Catalonia is mopped up Franco can turn thousands of troops southward for knockout blows against Madrid and Valencia.

Sabadell became the hub of the new operations as one column spread across the Granollers road and another moved toward Badalona on the northeastern coast road to effect a junction with Gen. Yague's Moroccans, who drove through Barcelona after moving in from the south.

(In Madrid newspaper headlines proclaimed "Even though we are beaten in Catalonia we do not admit defeat." Recalling that in 1812, after a four-year war, only Cadiz had not been conquered by Napoleon, the loyalists said that "When all seemed lost even worse than now the tide was turned and Spain was free again in two years.")

Loyalists Explain Retreat

Dispatches from Figueras said Premier Juan Negrin and a handful of government officials struggled tonight with the enormous task of reorganizing 250,000 loyalist soldiers.

The Negrin government announced from Gerona late in the afternoon that "Barcelona is now occupied by Italian troops."

It was explained any attempt to hold the city would have risked isolation of some of the best elements and most important materials of the republican army.

"These have now been withdrawn to a new front north of the city for defense," it was announced.

Explaining that only old men, women and children remained behind in the city, the Negrin government said that a last-ditch fight in the streets would have meant "an inhuman massacre among a population already cruelly tried."

Italians Bomb Refugees

Complete evacuation of the city was made impossible, it was announced, by Italian planes which constantly bombed and machine-gunned refugees fleeing along the two main highways leading north.

The Italian planes weer said to have taken hundreds of lives.

Figueras, 20 miles south of France's Pyrenees border, and one of the government's two new provisional capitals, was crammed to overflowing with destitute refugees and soldiers driven from the surrendered city.

Many soldiers had lost their weapons and had no idea where their units were. They came limping into town on foot, hungry and exhausted. Most of them, like the refugees, had eaten nothing in several days.

Negrin convened his cabinet ministers in Gerona and decided to continue the fight in both the Catalonian and Madrid-Valencia zones as long as possible.

The loyalist and Basque cabinets sat together with Jose Antonio Aguire, president of the Basque autonomy, and heard Foreign Minister Julio Alvarez del Vayo report on his futile efforts to persuade France to open her frontier to arms shipments.

Loyalists Resist

There was sporadic resistance on the Barcelona outskirts in the early morning hours; but at noon, when the order came from Franco for the triumphal march, no shots were to be heard.

Within two hours the converging nationalists—the Moors of Gen. Juan Yague from the south and the Navarrese from the north and west—were in the Plaza de Cataluna and at 5 p. m. the Barcelona radio station announced, with a blare of nationalist anthems and shouts of "Viva Franco!" that the occupation of every part of the city was complete.

Simultaneously four divisions of Navarrese and one mixed Italian and Navarrese division advanced from Tibidabo fortress on the west, through Pedralbes suburb and into the city proper.

Long caravans of food trucks followed the tanks and troops.

Warships in Harbor

Franco's warships headed by the crack cruiser Canarias, steamed into the harbor escorting a fleet of food ships.

The public life of Barcelona was being reorganized rapidly under the direction of hundreds of blue-shirted military police and Franco's new mayor, Miguel Pla.

Within a day or two the nationalist capital will be transferred to Barcelona from Burgos.

Loyalists Plan Stand

By the Associated Press.

The Spanish Embassy, after contacting the loyalist government by cable, said yesterday the government probably would establish itself in Gerona, about 50 miles north of Barcelona.

The embassy said loyalist troops in Catalonia were taking up new positions north of Barcelona and would continue to resist the insurgent advance.

Walter C. Thurston, American charge d'affaires in Spain, telephoned the State Department he was setting up new headquarters for the American Embassy at Perpignan, France, close to the Spanish border.

He said it had not been feasible to find quarters in the small Spanish towns in northern Catalonia at this time.

Sumners Calls Conservatives To Forums

He Compares Groups To That Organized In Hoover's Regime

Organization of an informal legislative forum to discuss "the fundamentals of Government" and issues involved in legislation pending in Congress yesterday was announced by Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

Sumners, one of the most influential conservatives of the House, who figured prominently in opposition to the President's court plan, said the group would be bipartisan and open to all legislators who wished to participate.

"It is in no sense a bloc, and there isn't any great secrecy about it," said Cumners. "Between 15 and 20 of us already have had two meetings, and we will have others. Members don't have the time to discuss these matters on the floor. In these informal night sessions, we can just think out loud, and express our views without talking to a gallery."

Sumners compared the group to the old "legislative forum" organized in the closing days of the Hoover Administration—a group of about 100 members, of which Sumners was chairman.

A similar group was organized last session by the so-called "Young Turks" of the House. That group, composed of liberal members, led by former Representative Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, and its ranks were thinned by the last election.

Physicists Meet In Three-Day Study of Cold

Leading physicists from American and European universities gathered in a "working conference" yesterday at George Washington University to open a three-day study of the behavior of matter at very low temperatures.

The conference, sponsored by George Washington University and Carnegie Institution, is the fifth annual Washington Conference on Theoretical Physics. Among those participating is Niels Bohr, director of the University Institute for Theoretical Physics, in Copenhagen, Denmark, who created the quantum theory of atomic structure.

Others to attend will be Enrico Fermi, of the Royal University of Rome, visiting professor of physics at Columbia University; Gregory Breit, University of Wisconsin; F. London, of the University of Bristol, England, visiting professor at Duke University; J. H. VanVleck, Harvard University; Dr. F. Seitz, University of Pennsylvania; H. Uhlenbeck and Harold C. Urey, Columbia University; F. Bitter, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and J. H. Diecke and J. E. Mayer, Johns Hopkins University.

3 Beat and Rob Trolley Motorman

Beaten into semiconsciousness before several passengers, a streetcar motorman last night was robbed by three colored men and left wandering through the streets near Upshur and Fifth streets northwest.

Picked up by Private Stephen J. Elliott, of Second Precinct, who was off duty, Harry Welder, 61, the motorman, said he was beaten and robbed while his car was in motion out Upshur street.

Three colored men, shortly before, held up Wolff Farfer, 44, in his grocery store at 68 K street northeast. He told police they got $10 while he vainly attempted to attract the attention of his wife, who was in rear of the store.

later recommendations might "reasonably be expected."

Cross-examination during the two days of testimony has been directed almost entirely toward ascertaining the Administration's full plans for the island. A considerable section of the committee seems not yet convinced that even the full recommended development of Guam, as urged in the report but not in the bill, is a purely defensive move as declared by the Navy.

Meanwhile the War Department revealed plans for an emergency training campaign to obtain pilots and mechanics for the 3,200-plane increase provided in the President's $552,000,000 defense program. Using civilian air schools for preliminary training, the War Department plans to start 4,000 prospective flyers through the mill in the 16 months beginning March 1. Eleven classes of 370 cadets will be started every six weeks, with the expectation that 2,134 pilots will be produced.

Recruiting to Begin

Because pilots and air mechanics take as long to be trained as planes are produced, an intensive recruiting program will be immediately started. Seven hundred men will be taken into the Air Corps each month beginning March 1, with the program stepped up to 1,000 a month in July, and dropping off next January. The Air Corps will be more than doubled in two years, then having 4,663 officers and 43,337 men as against the present strength of 2,495 officers and 18,194 men. Three hundred Reserve officers now on active duty will be taken into the regular Army immediately, it was said, but the remainder of the increase will be spread over 10 years. Large numbers of Air Reserve officers will be maintained on extended active duty during the expansion, with ultimately 1,460 of the 4,663 officer pilots maintained in a reserve status.

Increases in other branches of the Army will raise its strength from 12,700 officers and 165,000 men to 18,719 officers and 202,500 men. Despite this expansion, War Department officials said, the American Army will still rank about seventeenth or eighteenth among the world's military forces. Other features of the personnel plan involve the addition of 500 officers and 5,285 men for Air Corps supporting arms, 180 officers and 6,400 for expanded Panama Canal defenses, and calling of medical reserve officers to active duty.

Gen. Gasser Testifies

Brig. Gen. L. D. Gasser, assistant chief of staff, stated in putting this program before the House Military Committee that a redistribution of men among the branches of the Army would follow the expansion. He said that 50 honor graduates of R. O. T. C. units would be commissioned immediately in the Regular Army.

Chairman May, of the House Military Committee, said the group would probably report out next week nine bills on the expansion of the Army. He said that the committee would probably combine the various measures into one bill and bring it before the House for earliest action. Several patriotic organizations and possibly the pacifist societies are all that remain to be heard by the committee.

Questioned about the fortifications necessary to defend an air and submarine base at Guam, Admiral Hepburn said that a garrison about the size of that in the Philippines would be required, or about 12,000 troops and sailors, together with artillery and antiaircraft guns. At least 18 to 24 submarines, and about 60 seaplanes plus "some land planes" would be stationed at the island, he said.

Plans for Bases

Under the Navy's plans, submarine and air bases would be provided at Guam, Midway and Wake in the Pacific and at Puerto Rico in the Atlantic; air bases would be established at Jacksonville, Fla.; Kodiak and Sitka, Alaska; Kaneohe Bay, Alaska, and at Johnston and Palmyra Islands in the Pacific; submarine bases would be established at Unalaska in the Aelution Islands; while the existing naval centers at Hampton Roads, Va.; Pensacola, Fla.; Pear Harbor, Hawaii; San Diego, Calif.; the Panama Canal Zone; Yorktown Va., and Hawthorne, Nevada, would be expanded. These are the localities recommended by the Hepburn board for earliest completion.

Several other projects, such as the proposed bases on Narragansett Bay, at Corpus Christi, Tex., and in the Virgin Islands, recommended by the Hepburn report in Category "B", "for later completion," the Navy would like to have ready by 1948, but it is said that even if Congress would provide the necessary funds, it would be impossible to complete them by that year.

'Jesse James' Glosses Character of Bandit

Film Play at Palace Exalts Technicolor; George Brent Arrives From Hawaii; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

"JESSE JAMES," Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a screen-play by Nunnally Johnson, with Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott and Henry Hull, Slim Summerville, J. Edward Bromberg, Brian Donlevy, John Carradine, Donald Meek, John Russell, Jane Darwell, Charles Tannen, Claire Du Brey, Willard Robertson and Arthur Aylesworth. Directed by Henry King. Technicolor director, Natalie Kalmus. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At the Palace Theater.

The Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of "Jesse James," which yesterday opened its premiere Washington engagement on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, throws an entirely new light upon the character, motivating impulses and events that influenced the life of the man whose name has come down through more than half a century as the symbol of all that was brutal, murderous and completely pernicious in the early days of the development of the West. It makes the titular character in the play a victim of circumstances, which he met with a conception of justice that perhaps was distorted, but which, at least, was honest. If the lily has been gilded, in a manner of speaking, in this instance, it has been done in the cause of soundly sympathetic drama and something in the nature of a vindication of a man who was prompted to his lawless acts by harassments that few human souls could be expected to bear.

BELL

If one is to take the Nunnally Johnson script for "Jesse James" at face value, the transcontinental railroads were more than a bit ruthless with the landowners whose farms hedged the rights of way they coveted. The James boys were prompted to their first transgressions of the law by provocations that are made to seem, in the film, ample justification for any retributive measures they might have been moved to adopt. The railroad people were pretty tough hombres and Jesse and Frank James merely fought them with their own weapons. They shot down a few predatory thugs, robbed a few trains and banks and otherwise vented their spleen in a primitive sort of vengeance for heinous wrongs, but, in the celluloid, their case is made out to be less condemnatory than might be supposed from the reputation for deliberate banditry for its own sake that has attached to their names since Jesse James was murdered in cold blood by a disgruntled accomplice back in the year 1882.

There is no cause here and now, of course, to hold a brief for the James brothers. They may or may not have been precisely as the film play of "Jesse James" makes them appear. The only point is that into the warp and woof of his screen drama Nunnally Johnson has woven a great deal that is human, moving, defensible and excitingly melodramatic. The James boys, it seems, were not such bad fellows. Certainly the thrilling work Mr. Johnson has contrived with their names as its basis is no mean contribution to the list of the year's outstanding films.

Power and Fonda Are Excellently Cast

Jesse and Frank James are impersonated on the screen with what seems to this column to be fine skill on the part of Tyrone Power and Henry Fonda. I see nothing importantly wrong with the casting of Tyrone Power in the name part. He plays his role with admirable restraint and a degree of kindliness that makes him an immensely sympathetic person. Henry Fonda, as Frank, has not so much to do, but does what he has with a competence that quite matches the youthful Mr. Power's ability to lift Jesse James considerably above the level of the Capones, the Dutch Schultzes and others of the present era's conspicuous "bad men."

Brian Donlevy, Randolph Scott, Jane Darwell, as the mother of the inadvertent desperadoes; Donald Meek, as the cringing president of the railroad that precipitated all of the violent episodes celebrated in the film; Henry Hull, as the fiery newspaper editor in the little Missouri town where most of the action centers, and a long list of others add realism and believability to a melodrama of intense and sustained interest. In the feminine role of chief concern, Nancy Kelly strengthens the fine impression she made in "Submarine Patrol," lending a further note of credence and charm to a story which either history or Mr. Darryl F. Zanuck's research department has grossly warped.

The time has passed, I think, to emphasize the values that Technicolor is able to bestow upon screen plays of this nature. Technicolor has become so perfected in its power to capture all of the delicate as well as the more vivid hues of nature that it may be taken for granted as a definite adjunct to the achievement of complete pictorial realism. That is the function it performs in the present instance. The color treatment of "Jesse James" is admirably accomplished and comprises one of the picture's distinct assets.

The supporting bill of short subjects at the Palace this week is worthy of note. It is led by another Technicolor subject in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of Pete Smith's whimsical novelty, called "Penny's Picnic." This is the short reel in which Prudence Penny, a West Coast domestic economist of renown, demonstrates in what manner unique feats in food preparation can be managed out on the picnic grounds with few of the usual aids to cookery present. Miss Penny cleverly dishes up a gastronomic feast that would do credit to the most modern of kitchens, with nothing more than a camp fire and a few tin pans at her disposal. Any other picnics than hers will seem pretty second-rate after this. There is a Betty Boop cartoon comedy on the bill, too, but I wouldn't be too sure it is the best one these eyes ever have seen. In fact, I would be pretty sure it isn't. "The News of the Day," at the reviewed performance yesterday afternoon, was interminably long and altogether too repetitive to be of best effect. The whole thing, nevertheless, adds up to a diversified and thoroughly interesting bill, with Jesse James emerging from the contumely of long years of defamation and taking his place, more or less, among the more upright citizens of an earlier day.

'Outward Bound' Attracts Large Sale

It is a pleasure to report that Washington's response to the announcement of the "command performance" of the Playhouse Company's production of Sutton Vane's drama of "Outward Bound," at the National Theater Sunday night, as one of the principal contributions to the President's Birthday Celebrations for the combat of infantile paralysis, has been such that only a few seats remain to be sold. The first and second balconies already are completely sold out. There remain only a comparatively small number of orchestra seats to be disposed of and a few of the donor's boxes, priced at $50, $75 and $100.

With the performance still three days away, it seems a foregone conclusion that by Sunday night every available seat in the National Theater will have been sold and standing-room at a premium.

The cast of "Outward Bound" is all-star, headed by Laurette Taylor and Florence Reed and including such admirable players as Bramwell Fletcher, Morgan Farley, Helen Chandler, Alexander Kirkland, Vincent Price and several others of like standing.

If ticket-buying for this event is one of the things on your mind, the time has come to hurry.

George Brent's presence in Washington, as one of the visiting motion-picture stars contributing to the President's Birthday Celebrations, was the occasion of a bit of hoop-de-do at the Carlton yesterday afternoon. Mr. Brent was guest of honor at a cocktail party flung, with accustmed opulence, by the local executives of the Warner Brothers organization. Mr. Brent probably has gone to greater pains to be here than any of the other stars who will be putting in their appearances from now on. He came all the way from a vacation in Hawaii to honor the general committee of the celebrations, Washington and the admirable cause in behalf of which he will appear at the Birthday Balls in seven Washington hotels on Monday night. There will be more here later concerning Mr. Brent. Order your copy of The Post now (Advt).

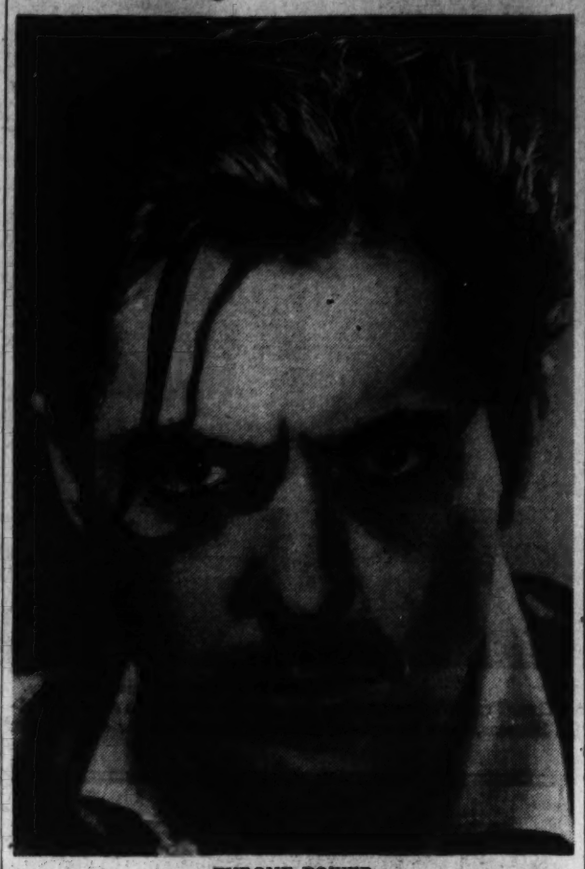
Sheds New Light on Famous Character



TYRONE POWER,
as he appears in the title role of the Twentieth Century-Fox Technicolor production of "Jesse James," the new week's feature which opened yesterday on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Mr. Power is surrounded by an excellent cast, led by Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Brian Donlevy, Jane Darwell, Randolph Scott and numerous others

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Jan. 26.

SENTENCE: District Attorney Dewey already has decided upon the recommendations he will make concerning the sentences to be imposed upon Dixie Davis, George Weinberg and Harry Schoenhaus . . . Dewey will ask that this trio, for having turned State's evidence, be given suspended sentences.

FAME: Jean Hersholt, who portrayed the Dafoe role in all the Dionne movies, has visited Callender, Ontario, four times. On each occasion Hersholt has attempted to see Mrs. Dionne, but she refused. Her explanation is: "I don't like being looked at by movie people" . . . Hersholt went to the souvenir store operated by Papa Dionne and paid $1 for a photo of the quintuplets . . . Dionne charges 25 cents extra for an autographed photo, and Hersholt prepared to pay for this added touch. Dionne pocketed only the dollar. "For you," he insisted, "my autograph is free."

PROTEST: Eugene Lyons, author of "Assignment in Utopia" and new editor of the American Mercury, was told of Doris Duke's new mansion in Honolulu. He listened to the descriptives of its magnificence and sighed: "It's enough to make one a Trotskyite" . . . "I say that," he quickly added, "because in these days a person doesn't know what to be, as a protest."

DISCOVERY: A Toronto dealer in old furniture recently started to convert an ammunition shell into a combination lamp and ash tray . . . He began to polish the shell and discovered that it bore an inscription: "First American Shell Fired Into a German Submarine. 12th May 1917. U. S. S. Wainwright. Capt. Pottitt, F. Lieut. Nixon" . . . He notified the United States Navy Department and was informed that, while they were anxious to obtain it, no appropriation had been made for that purpose—that if some one would donate it, the shell would be placed in the Naval Academy Museum in Annapolis together with a card bearing the donor's name.

ACHIEVEMENT: General Sessions Judge James G. Wallace has composed a number of popular songs which he sings at private functions. His favorite is: "I've Got Those Appellate-Division, No-Decision Blues."

DEFEAT: John Strachey was notified that the Federal courts had sustained his contention that he had a right to enter this country—but that his case cannot be considered completed until he has been examined with regard to his political beliefs . . . The day after that hearing is concluded and Strachey is advised that he has a legal right to remain in this country he'll take the first boat back to England.

CHATTER: Jock Whitney was a patient at the Eye Institute at Medical Center the other day . . . The Marquis de Cuevas, son-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, will be operated on at the same institution . . . Bob Crosby will succeed Benny Goodman on that cigarette program . . . Because the liquor bill for the press at the President's Birthday Ball last year was almost $700, that item has been eliminated for Monday's event . . . Bill Gropper, the artist, is attending the City Council sessions, making an oil portrait of every councilman—members of the first group elected under P. R. It will be presented to the Museum of the City of New York.

WEALTH: Jimmy Durante was discoursing upon the modern conception of the possession of money . . . "What good is money?" he stated. "Can money get you friendship? No . . . Can money get you loyalty? No . . . Can money get you happiness?. No . . . I'm speaking, of course, of Confederate money."

ECONOMY: From the questions asked the prospective jurors in the retrial of the Hines case, Dewey has indicated that he will ask the same question which resulted in the declaration of a mistrial . . . A suggestion therefore has been made that the district attorney can save the State a great deal of expense by calling Lyon Boston as his first witness and asking as his first question: "Now, then, what about Jimmy Hines and the poultry racket?"

PROGRESS: Walter Wanger is ballyhooing his newest movie, "Stagecoach," as a glorification of the vehicle that carried our pioneers across the plains of the Old West . . . The stagecoach used in the production was transported by train to Monument Valley, where the movie was filmed . . . The horses were shipped there in a fleet of modern trucks. John Ford, the director, flew his crew to Arizona by plane. And the Indian extras arrived in Fords.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 26.—I was broaching subjects and vouching opinions with W. C. Fields at Universal, where the old Roman is making "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," when I broached the touchiest subject of all, writers. "Ha!" he snorted, burying his cane in the California adobe, "the only time most of these movie writers ever do anything good is when they write their relatives asking for a job."

HEDDA HOPPER

As usual, Bill is writing his stuff himself. The picture has been in production a long time and their present worry is that they may have to call back Blackman, the animal hypnotist, for more scenes. But Blackman is now peacefully parked in Mexico awaiting the six-month expiration before he can get back into our country.

Bill, on the wagon, takes 2 ounces of sherry an hour, says he is getting sick of sissy drinks and as soon as the picture is over is going to do something big about it.

Rudy Vallee was rehearsing his boys and bawled out a sax player, said he wasn't playing something right.

Said the sax player, pointing to the music, "That's the way it should be played."

Rudy answered, "I want it played my way—I don't care how it's written."

"And you call yourself a musician," came back the sax player.

But Rudy said: "Listen—if I were a musician, I'd be sitting in a band playing a sax—instead of leading it."

Lewis Stone looks like a kindly old judge, but he's fed up with Mickey Rooney's hi-diddle-do-dads and decided to organize his own jazz band. He's the trap drummer, Agent Freddie Fralick plays the accordion; Dr. Charles Fletch, the banjo; Dr. Hy Weaver, the cornet, and Knute Winters, the piano. If television were only here, they'd get as many bookings as Gene Krupa.

Hollywood's still flirting with George M. Cohan hoping to get him here for an acting job. If they'd offer him a producer-writer-actor contract, I have a feeling he'd listen. Why should he travel 3,000 miles to act when he's forgotten more than some of our producers will ever learn. George M. Cohan is not only in show business, he is show business.

Irene Castle is heart-broken that she's saying good-by to Hollywood, but her son has to be returned to his father and she's hoping another job will bring her back to Hollywood the minute school is finished in June.

Mrs. Fred Astaire has been in Arizona for the last two weeks. She was paged while at Santa Anita and told of her son's accident. Seems a boulder had fallen on the youngster while he was out horseback riding, but he's well on the mend now.

Eddie Ellis and Joan Fontaine never got together when they were under contract at R. K. O., but Republic has taken advantage of this combination and they're both in "Man of Conquest." So are Richard Dix, Gail Patrick and Janet Beecher. And that's a picture I won't miss.

Twentieth-Century has thought up a new one. Four famous fliers—Ruth Nichols, Teddy Kenyon, Margot Tanner and Betty Huyler Gillis (chocolate heiress) have been engaged to escort eight of our beauties to 18 of our most important cities, where they'll drop a print of "Tailspin." It stars Alice Faye, Constance Bennett and Nancy Kelly.

Some actors earn their money the hard way. John Garfield told me that for "Juarez" he learned to ride a horse—well, almost—he only fell off three times; he fenced, operated artillery and ate tortillas. Eating tortillas was the hardest for him.

Curly-locks Phil Harris may be our next singing cowboy. And if so, Andy Devine declares he'll have the gravel taken out of his throat and compete. Please don't, Andy, I love it the way it is.

Violet Greener, "The Ghost of Hollywood," has some of our importants practically taking orders from her—and paying for the privilege! Janet Gaynor gave her $25 to answer three questions. And "Slapsie" Maxie is a steady customer, for both private and public advice. Lots of directors are on her list. They try to keep it a secret and use code numbers. When calling madame they say: "Number 13 would like an appointment for midnight." 'Tis said that a few years back when Darios reigned supreme, a producer gave him a $10,000 yearly retaining fee which may be what the Rev. Greener is hoping for.

Cecilia Parker Becomes Citizen

Canadian-born Cecilia Parker is taking out American citizenship papers.

The daughter of a Swiss mother and Canadian father, who served in the British army during the World War, Cecilia first came to Hollywood when she was 9 years old. She was born in Fort William, Ontario. Since her marriage last June to Actor Dick Baldwin she is eligible to file citizenship papers immediately, following the example of fellow-actress Luise Rainer.

Curiously enough Cecilia is one of three Canadian members of the "Hardy Family," the others being Ann Rutherford and Fay Holden. Miss Rutherford will become an American citizen on her twenty-first birthday in 1940.

Swiss Movement Inspired by Powell

A new "Swiss movement" is sweeping Switzerland and Eleanor Powell is the cause of it.

An Eleanor Powell Step Klub (it isn't called tap dancing over there) has been formed by her many Swiss admirers and branches are beginning to spring up all over the country.

Although the popular star of "Honolulu" is honorary president of 75 dance troupes in America, this marks the first club to be started in her honor on the Continent.

Hague Curbs On Meetings Held Illegal

U. S. Appeals Court Extends Verdict Against 'Deporting'

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Jan. 26.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals held today that Mayor Frank Hague and his Jersey City police violated the fundamental law of the Nation in denying the right of free assemblage to the Committee for Industrial Organization, the Civil Liberties Union and other groups.

In a 2-to-1 decision, the court upheld the decree of Federal District Judge William Clark enjoining Jersey City from prohibiting public C. I. O. meetings. In so doing it went further than Judge Clark by declaring unconstitutional ordinances under which Jersey City police had acted.

Invalidated Laws

Any public meetings not sanctioned by Mayor Hague's director of public safety.

The distribution in "any street or public place" of printed matter or signs.

The appellate court held the first "discriminatory" and unconstitutional. Of the second, the decision said: "Invalid upon its face, in that it violates freedom of speech and of the press."

"The evidence is uncontrovertible," said the circuit court in reviewing the proceedings of the lower court, "that he (Hague) was the spearhead of the movement to keep the appellee labor groups out of Jersey City."

Jersey Judge Dissents

The decision was written by Judge John Biggs, jr., of Delaware, and concurred in by Judge Albert B. Maris, Pennsylvania. Judge J. Warren Davis, New Jersey, dissented.

Later Charles Hershenstein, counsel for Hague, told the court Hague would ask the Supreme Court within 12 days whether it would hear an appeal. Attorneys for the C. I. O. and others let it be known they planned no meetings in Jersey City —pending the Supreme Court move.

The public meetings license ordinance was invalid, the decision said today, because "it permits the imposition of pervious restraint upon the right of the individual to speak before an assembly of his fellows in a public place. The ordinance therefore prohibits peaceable assembly except upon terms repugnant to free speech . . .

Question of Degree

"There is strong analogy between the right freely to publish the written or printed word and the right here in issue freely to speak in a public assembly. It may be argued that inflammatory words spoken before an audience may lead more quickly to violence than the printed word dispersed throughout a city. The question, however, is one of degree. Free speech and free assembly are commonplaces of democratic governments. They are unheard of under totalitarian regimes . . ."

Hague clashed with the C. I. O. in December, 1937. Jersey City police broke up rallies called by the union. Speakers were "deported" from the city. Six weeks later the C. I. O. and civil liberties union started action for the injunction that was granted November 7, 1938 and from which Hague promptly appealed.

Judge Davis agreed in enjoining authorities from enforcing the ordinance affecting distribution of printed matter, but dissented from that part of the lower court decree in regard to public meetings.

Key Bridge To Be Closed For 2 Days

Merchants Protest Barring of Autos During Repairs

Key Bridge will be closed from tomorrow night until Tuesday afternoon during construction of a ramp at the Virginia end to permit passage of streetcars and buses while an arch is being added to the ramp, Elmer L. Tarwater, bureau of public roads engineer, said yesterday.

Businessmen of Rosslyn, meanwhile, added their voice to protests of merchants in Georgetown against closing the bridge to private motor traffic. Meeting at Rosslyn last night, the Rosslyn Business Men's Association voted to ask the Arlington County Board of Supervisors Monday to join their protest.

The association, of which Moritz Cohen is president, also voted to ask Representative Howard W. Smith and the District Committees of House and Senate to investigate and take proper action. John Paul Jones, president of the Georgetown Business Men's Association, spoke.

Businessmen at the meeting estimated their losses from the closed bridge were as high some days as 60 per cent and never lower than 25 per cent. Another estimate placed weekly losses at not less than $75,000.

'Little Congress' Is 20 Years Old

The Little Congress will celebrate its twentieth anniversary at a banquet Saturday, March 25, in the Willard Hotel, it was announced last night.

Kenneth Romney, sergeant at arms of the House, and original sponsor of the Little Congress, is directing the preparations. Other charter members on the committee are Representative Sandrager of Rhode Island; Representative Lyndon Johnson, of Texas; Peter F. Snyder, former Assistant Secretary of Labor; Melvin D. Hildreth, attorney, and Judge J. M. Barker.

Active members of the committee are: Ben S. English, Virginia Hildebrand, Tommy Gilstrap, Ali Griffith and Arno Loessner.

Passage of the Ludlow amendment, calling for a National referendum before American troops could be sent to fight abroad, would be "suicidal" for this country, Stephen Chadwick, national commander of the American Legion, yesterday told fellow members of Kappa Sigma fraternity at a luncheon in the National Press Club.

"The best defense often is a good offense," Chadwick warned. "Aggression must be stopped before it ripens into invasion. If there are are any members of Congress who don't feel equal to the responsibility of voting for or against a declaration of war, they should resign and make way for men capable of the decision."

The head legionnaire denounced "subversive" doctrines in circulation among college students, leading them "to hold mass meetings and take Oxford oaths not to bear arms." "When Uncle Sam takes them by the nape of the neck and the seat of their pants, they'll know they're in the Army," he said.

confiscation of wealth by taxation; (3) Government ownership of all industry, business and every operation, with practical confiscation of all private party, and (4) the setting up of a great agency which would succeed the present Government insofar as its economic policy is concerned."

Voorhis Asks "Fair Play"

Later, Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, rose to ask "that fair play be used; that the facts be given, and that irresponsible charges not be allowed to take their place."

"I happen to know he is as fundamentally devoted to constitutional democracy as any man in this House," said Voorhis. "It is a most unfortunate thing that because a man disagrees with you or me on economic questions he therefore is not considered a good American."

Meanwhile Senate indications were that appointment of Amlie to the I. C. C. would precipitate a fight overshadowing opposition to all of the President's other nominations.

Senator Andrews (Democrat), of Florida, commented that this nomination could not be classed with the President's other Cabinet selections. Several Senators justified their vote for Harry Hopkins as Commerce Secretary on the ground that the President should have a "free hand" in selecting his Cabinet.

Amlie, defeated for re-election to the House in last fall's Progressive primaries, introduced measures and made speeches in the last Congress now generally being cited in opposition to his confirmation.

"Human Rights" Bill

His so-called "human rights" amendment proposed to give Congress power to take over all business by eminent domain.

His proposed "industrial expansion bill" would have set up a board to project a 10-year plan all industry would have to follow under penalty of a steep processing tax.

His Senate critics cite speeches suggesting the public debt could be increased another $50,000,000,000 and a capital levy on wealth could be invoked if necessary to ward off inflation.

Burke Studies Record

Although Amlie is to the left of the LaFollette Progressive Party, Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, who was not consulted on the nomination, is expected to support the appointee. Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, also indicated his view that belief in Government ownership of railroads does not "disqualify a man from being an interstate commerce commissioner."

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, said he was making a personal study of Amlie's record with a view to use in any Senate inquiry.

Bolles, in his speech in the House yesterday, said Amlie was "honest in his beliefs" and if confirmed would carry to the Interstate Commerce Commission an 'honest zeal for the destruction of the purpose for which this very agency of Government was formed."

Suicide Verdicts Issued in 2 Deaths

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald in the death of Edwin H. Tuttle, 65, retired Government employe, whose body was found hanging to a bedpost in his apartment at 405 Tenth street northwest, two days ago.

The coroner also issued a certificate of suicide in the death of Clyde E. Dexter, 31, former Board of Education employe, who shot himself in a restaurant at 801 Third street northwest.

Senate Votes at 3 P. M. Today On Restoring WPA Fund Cut

Relief

WPA Administrator Harrington. Later McKellar told the Senate that Harrington denied any official responsibility for the notices, but had located one of them and had ordered an investigation in an effort to fix blame. McKellar quoted Harrington as saying the notices had been posted without approval of any WPA official.

Under yesterday's Senate agreement, the McKellar amendment to restore the cut would take precedence over the committee's so-called "snow amendment" providing a formula to prevent large WPA dismissals during the next two winter months.

Byrnes, Adams to speak

For the $725,000,000 approved by the House, and later sustained by the Senate Appropriations Committee, McKellar would substitute $875,000,000—the amount President Roosevelt said is necessary to continue WPA without sharp reductions for the next five months.

Both Adams and Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, author of the "compromise," will take the floor before the vote to argue any increase is unnecessary. The Byrnes formula, they will contend, will prevent WPA workers being "thrown out in the snow." And an additional proviso, they will point out, gives the President authority to ask for supplemental funds if conditions justify it.

Chief arguments for restoration of the $875,000,000 will be made by Senator McKellar and Majority Leader Barkley. Barkley indicated he will say the Administration is willing to take the Byrnes provisio against February and March layoffs. But he is expected to argue that the proviso for emergency estimates by the White House would force the President to make such a request for more funds by March 1, in order to obtain them in April.

Harrington Denies "Mistake"

In answer to charges that Harrington erred by $56,000,000 in estimating WPA needs, Barkley yesterday read a written denial by Harrington and a letter from Budget Director Bell asking the full $875,000,000 appropriation.

Adams had accused Harrington of "doubling up" by repeating funds for the week of February 1 to Februrary 7.

Harrington, in his letter to Barkley, said he had made no "mistake." He said funds for the week of February 1 to 7 (existing funds will not be exhausted until February 7) were necessary so WPA could have a carryover of WPA pay-roll obligations of one week, after the end of this fiscal year.

Bell's letter said the $725,000,000 House appropriation would have to be increased by $150,000,000 if the President's WPA program for the next five months is to be carried out.

Pepper, Tydings Tilt

A declaration by Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, that he favored continuance of Government spending until the national income can be raised to a high revenue-producing basis, brought Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, to his feet with a challenge.

"But suppose that doesn't happen?" asked Tydings.

"Then our economic system must fail," said Pepper.

Tydings said he could not concede that the permanent problem of unemployment could be solved by temporary methods of borrowing sums that must be paid by future generations of taxpayers.

Senator Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, who told the Senate he was making his first speech, said the full $875,000,000 was urgently needed, and suggested if economy was the aim, cuts might be made elsewhere to better advantage.

When he said one other place to economize might be on loans to cotton farmers, Senator Connolly (Democrat), of Texas, bobbed up at once with a sharp protest.

Smathers at first objected to the interruptions, saying he was dismayed enough in making his maiden speech "without being harassed by questions."

Van Duzer Asks Physical Tests For Motorists

All Those Involved In Accidents Would Undergo Examination

Physical examinations for all District motorists involved in one or more accidents was advocated yesterday by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer as a measure to rid the streets of dangerous drivers.

Van Duzer said he would recommend such a system to the Commissioners following completion of a report on the subject by Dr. Harry R. DeSilva, research expert of Yale University. Dr. DeSilva, said the traffic head, is now drafting a physical examination plan especially adapted for urban traffic control.

Van Duzer proposed the examination should include eyes, blood pressure, reaction time, hearing and a careful check of other physical defects which would impair the safety of other motorists and pedestrians.

Under the suggested plan, a driver involved in an acident would be summoned for a complete physical checkup before he was again permitted to operate a car on Washington streets, said an Duzer.

an Duzer warned also that unless District car owners make greater haste in securing 1939 license plates, many are going to find themselves without tags by the deadline of midnight, February 28.

With only 27 more working days in which to distribue the plates, 125,000 remain to be issued, he said. The tags went on sale at the Traffic Department last Monday. To date, 13,000 have been mailed to applicants.

Too many persons, he lamented, wait until the last minute and then expect to get their tags without delay. On the deadline day last year, 6,500 persons stood in line to receive new plates.

Man Burned Seriously In Rooming House Fire

A man was burned seriously and seven others escaped injury yesterday when a rooming house in the 200 block of Seaton court northwest caught fire. The two-story brick dwelling was engulfed in flames before firemen arrived. Damage was estimated at $1,500.

The injured man, James Covington, 23, colored, was treated at Casualty Hospital for first and second degree burns. Police said the fire started in the basement.

Not a Function of WPA

Keen disappointment is being expressed over the disruption of the WPA project for instruction of crippled children in Washington. Once more youngsters who are physically unfit are to be further handicapped by lack of education. That situation properly arouses indignation.

In seeking remedial action, however, it would be thoroughly illogical to rely upon the WPA. When this project was undertaken every one understood that it was merely a stopgap—that education of crippled children by the WPA would be curtailed or abandoned as soon as work-relief funds became scarce. Now that the expected has happened, the only reasonable course is to insure that education for those too crippled to attend school will not be dependent upon the vagaries of relief appropriations.

The WPA has found retrenchment essential. In reducing its rolls it has a public responsibility to eliminate first those who are entitled to public benefits under the social security system. The fact that this move is a blow to education for cripples emphasizes the absurdity of current relief methods. The abandonment of projects only slightly related to the creation of employment is an essential step in bringing the WPA more closely into line with the policy contemplated by Congress. Altogether too much attention has been given in the past to educational projects that, while in themselves desirable, are wholly outside the province of a work-relief organization.

So the disruption of the local visiting-teacher service in the homes of crippled children cannot be reasonably criticized. The WPA is merely withdrawing from a field which theoretically it should never have entered. One advantage of reducing WPA funds is to encourage a proper reallocation of activities which that organization is wholly incompetent to undertake.

As a rudimentary principle of democratic government, free education should be provided for all children, including cripples unable to leave hospitals or homes. Citizens will have a strong case to demand funds for instruction of cripples in the Nation's Capital if they seek them through the District budget. An appropriation for this purpose can doubtless be obtained from Congress if it is sufficiently emphasized that money spent on education in the District should logically be placed under control of the regular school system.

A Five-Year Census

By a rather small margin the House defeated a motion to strike from the first deficiency bill an appropriation of $3,500,000 for a census building to be erected in the District. In this instance a vote to spend public money appears to be entirely justified.

Representative Woodrum states that the building is to be strictly utilitarian, and will provide storage space needed for rapidly accumulating records, besides housing the enlarged staff engaged in preparation of the 1940 population census. In his opinion the building will pay for itself inside ten years in terms of rentals saved.

The scope and importance of the work done by the Bureau of the Census is steadily growing. The advent of social security, the agricultural adjustment program, minimum-wage legislation and unemployment relief plans emphasize the need for pertinent data relating to population, agriculture, manufactures and business activity. Between the decennial population censuses the bureau is engaged in a great variety of special census activities, notably the biennial census of manufactures, the quinquennial census of the electrical industries, annual compilations of financial statistics of State and city governments, and current business and production statistics.

The regular decennial census covers a wide range of data, throwing light upon shifts in population and changes in the economic activities and occupational resources of the people. The population data, for instance, provide a basis for the allotment of Federal funds to States and local governments and a means of determining the number of people eligible for benefits. As the Department of Commerce points out in its last annual report, population statistics provide a measurement of the effective coverage of a particular program and a foundation for fundamental research in regard to the effect of changes in existing law.

Ten years is too long a time to wait between censuses. We need more frequent surveys to determine the direction and intensity of geographical and occupational shifts of population, especially in an era when great stress is being laid upon the importance of long-range planning to effect better utilization of our man power and our economic resources. If we had a comprehensive five-year census of the population, resources and economic activities of the Nation, our legislators, administrators, industrial leaders and social planners would have a much more reliable body of information by which to chart their course.

A five-year census would not double the work of the bureau, because it would embrace various interim censuses. Moreover it would do away with the need, real or fancied, for emergency inquiries and investigations, such as the recent unemployment census which had very little value. The work of the bureau is certainly destined to expand in the years ahead, and this growth could best be regularized by providing for a five-year census.

The Fall Of Barcelona

With the fall of Barcelona the Spanish civil war enters its final phase. Even though a large proportion of the republican army was safely withdrawn before the capture of the city, these troops are obviously too demoralized, and too short of equipment, to continue serious resistance in northeastern Spain. And speedy disintegration of the government's forces became a certainty when Foreign Minister Bonnet, in Paris yesterday, told the Chamber of Deputies that France "will continue to practice nonintervention."

There remains central Spain, where the republic still controls Madrid, the seaport of Valencia and territory with an area perhaps one-quarter of the entire country. Whether resistance will be continued here is uncertain. But there is little doubt that such resistance would be a fight for a lost cause. Short on food and munitions, with no prospect of replenishment through the blockade which Franco is now in a position to enforce, the doom of republican sympathizers in central Spain is sealed. The nationalists may still have several months of campaigning ahead of them. But no informed observer can any longer doubt the certainty of Franco's eventual victory.

It follows that the movement to raise the embargo against the loyalist Spanish government will now collapse, as that government is itself collapsing. Instead will rise the issue of American recognition for the Franco regime, to which this country has as yet denied even belligerent status. There is little likelihood that this recognition will be extended promptly. As long as Madrid and Valencia remain in loyalist hands such action would obviously be premature. But the essential point is that the nature of the question for the Administration is changed. It is no longer: Will the embargo be raised? The new question is: Will Franco be recognized?

A realistic visualization of the present situation does not mean that there is any pleasure in regarding it. Americans who have tried to regard the Spanish civil war dispassionately, in terms of their country's interests rather than from a particularist viewpoint, have never favored a knock-out victory for either side. Had the republicans won communism would have been unpleasantly influential in its councils. When the insurgents triumph fascism will be equally dominant. The argument that Franco can now dispense with the forces which gave him victory would be more impressive if those who use it had ever reasoned that Communist influence would have been equally negligible in the case of a loyalist triumph.

The latter eventuality, however, is altogether out of the picture. By the grace of foreign support the nationalists have now triumphed. What Germany and Italy will reasonably demand in return for the assistance which alone has made Franco's victory possible is now the issue. And a strong indication of the answer is found in the current cables from Rome. When Mussolini last night acclaimed the Italian triumph at Barcelona "a wildly cheering Fascist crowd raised shouts of Tunisia."

Why not? There has to be a pay-off for the thousands of Italians slain on Spanish battlefields; for the tens of millions of Italian money spent in the bombs and munitions which have slowly blasted republican morale. If, as Franco announces, there will be no cession of Spanish territory that merely means the compensation will be given in other ways—by aiding Italy to bring pressure on France; by aiding Germany to expand her influence in Latin America; by whatever indirect assistance Franco and Mussolini and Hitler agree to around the council table.

For that reason the French government is now hastily calling conscripts to the colors, six months ahead of schedule. For that reason Chamberlain has hastily called his ministers into conference in London. For that same "accumulation of speculative uneasiness over foreign happenings," as a financial writer puts it, the New York stock market slides down. The fall of Barcelona has settled the fate of republican Spain, no doubt. The sunset-tlements on the other side of the ledger will now become apparent.

There was a chance that Munich would produce a stable peace. That chance has vanished. That the Fascist triumph at Barcelona will bring constructive results is even less probable. For the first time, now, this triumphant totalitarian doctrine points westward to the New World. As Mussolini puts it, referring to the slogan of the Spanish loyalists—"They shall not pass."—"We have passed and I say to you that we will pass"

He is not boasting idly.

A Job For Congress

A few months ago the Federal Communications Commission adopted a number of reforms in what seemed to be an effort to avoid a Congressional investigation. Now the President is willing to dump the whole troublesome problem of radio control into the lap of Congress. Does this mean that the so-called FCC "purge" has failed to achieve the desired ends?

A definite answer to this question should be found in the specific proposals to be advanced by the FCC, or in the advice which it will offer to Senate and House committees. At present it appears that Chairman McNinch has gone as far as he can go toward reorganization of the FCC under the present law, yet still finds conditions unsatisfactory. That assumption is strengthened by the fact that President Roosevelt shifted Mr. McNinch to the FCC to direct a house-cleaning.

Motives behind this move are far less important, however, than the fact that the Chief Executive has brought the confused situation within the FCC to the attention of Congress. Regulatory agencies of this type cannot be properly whipped into line by the appointment of a new chairman. Even if Mr. McNinch had succeeded in ousting incompetents and eliminating dissension, suspicion that all was not well within the commission would have remained. It would then have been accused of yielding to executive pressure—a development scarcely less satisfactory than internal bickering and frustration.

Now that the issue has been raised, Congress ought to probe thoroughly into the operation of the FCC to ascertain in the public interest just where the difficulty lies. Mr. McNinch seems to be chiefly concerned with reducing the size of the commission from seven to three members. That might be only a means of ousting those who do not agree with him. Perhaps a commission of three could function more effectively. But the tendency has been to lodge regulatory functions in larger agencies with a view to protecting the public against arbitrary action. Congress will certainly wish to know the whole background of the FCC row and the deficiencies of the law before it decides to reduce the size of the commission.

When the record has been fully explored it will probably be found that one of the FCC's chief handicaps has been the filling of vital positions by political jobseekers knowing nothing of radio or other means of communication. The overhauling now proposed could be supported with far more enthusiasm if the Amlie and other appointments did not warrant fears that even a reorganized commission would become a happy hunting ground for "lame ducks."

Chile's Plight

The sympathy of all Americans goes out to the Chilean people in this their hour of disaster.

As details pile up, it becomes apparent that even in a land which is frequently the victim of seismic disturbances, this week's earthquake was of unprecedented magnitude and destructiveness. Town after town has been laid waste. Chillan, whose history goes back to the earliest days of the nation, counts its dead at between 3,000 and 4,000 out of a total population of 40,000. Two-thirds of Concepcion, third largest city of the republic, is in ruins. The dead in San Rosendo number approximately 2,000. And the same grim story is told, in greater or lesser degree, from other points along the 450-mile belt which experienced this terrible heaving of the earth.

During recent years Chile has been passing through a difficult period. Her economic system has never fully recovered from the disappearance of her market for nitrates. Like other nations of this hemisphere, she has also suffered from declining prices for raw materials. These economic difficulties have had as a sequel an increase in political tensions which have found expression, happily by a non-violent means, in a marked shift in the political balance of power from Right to Left.

The earthquake and the destruction of life and property it brought in its wake will complicate Chile's already grave difficulties. But the disaster has also had the effect of unifying the people. With the same courage they have always shown in their long history, the Chileans, under the leadership of President Aguirre, are taking every measure to meet the needs of the devastated areas.

In this endeavor they have the fullest sympathy of the people of the United States. President Roosevelt was speaking on behalf of the entire Nation when, in a message to President Aguirre, he offered assistance for relief of the stricken sister republic to the south.

Questions?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We enjoy The Post—the only news sheet we want in Washington.

Your international news is excellent. I am on the fence looking at both sides, but I am puzzled about many things. Perhaps other readers might clear me up. First, since China is as near Japan as Japan is to China, why doesn't the Chinese army fly bombing planes over to Tokyo and burn up the paper villages, rather than let the Japanese burn up the Chinese towns? Isn't that queer?

Then why do they call the trouble in Spain civil war when the raiders are Italians and Germans—not Spaniards? Why should the Spaniards not be allowed to choose their own religious faith? Up to a few years ago, under Spanish rule, I understand no Protestant church was allowed in Spain, and no other religion was allowed to be worshiped, even in secret. Now it appears the matter of religious worship is to be crammed down their throats, with alien bombs.

Furthermore, why is it to be deplored that Germany looks with covetous eyes on all those small ccuntries to the East? Would it not be better for central Europe for it to be formed into a United States of Europe? Then this terror of invasion would end. Would it not? And at the same time a large band of parasites would be done away with, in the shape of 5-and-10 kings and princes. E. B. N.

Landover, Md., Jan. 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The United States has long been looked upon by crushed humanity throughout the world as the "land of the free and the home of the brave." What must these peoples now think of this boast in the light of our cowardly attitude toward the democratic government of Spain?

Are our politicians more concerned about getting votes of Fascist sympathizers than in observing the American tradition of preserving democracy? Are these politicians willing to see democracy crushed in Spain? Let them answer, and answer quickly. EDWIN M. DEAN.

Washington, Jan. 25.

True or False?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the welter of misinformed argument about the Spanish issue, couldn't The Post outline some ascertained facts that both sides could rely on?

Here are some items; are they true or false?

1. Parts of old Russia have been used in making relatively small and weak states of Esthonia, Finland, Latvia and Lithuania. After nearly 20 years in Russia's shadow, they remain completely independent and non-communist.

2. Varying figures from newspaper writers in Spain give the Italian troops in Spain as 80,000 and upward, organized under 11 or more Italian generals. They give the foreigners of all nationalities fighting for the loyalists at figures varying from 3,000 to 6,000, serving under native Spanish generals.

3. The credibility of reported relative quantities of men and materials supplied by Russia and Italy is affected by their geography. Italy is close, with ample shipping; Russia is remote, with scanty shipping.

4. Gen. Franco is claimed to be defending the good Christian citizens in Spain. To assure his safety, he has a personal bodyguard, composed of turbaned Mohammedans from Morocco.

5. The religious activities in Spain were almost completely under the control of the Catholic Church, while the Christians of Abyssinnia belonged to the Coptic Church, an independent order. While hundreds of thousands have died in Spain, the church has been unremittingly vocal on one side; but while similar killings occurred in Abyssinia, the church was largely silent, making no official protest.

6. In all the conflicts that have been occurring in the world, a consideration of the issues affecting the general well being of mankind gives no criterion by which the attitude of the Catholic Church can be predicted, but by considering the issues affecting the authority of the church its partizanship can be invariably determined.

7. The New York Herald Tribune, Paris edition, on July 24, 1938, printed a United Press dispatch from Saragossa, in Franco territory, citing a new municipal law imposing fines on citizens appearing without their coats. The dispatch quoted the law in part as follows: "Unfortunately such habits are relics of democratic liberties which it is necessary to correct."

Religious Persecution

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since some supporters of the Negrin government claim that there is no religious persecution in Leftist Spain, kindly permit me to draw attention to the following dispatch which appeared in the New York Times on January 17, 1939.

An open-air mass was said in the main plaza of Tarragona this morning with the fervent assistance of the civil population remaining in the city—which is estimated to number more than 20,000. It is reported they had heard no mass since the beginning of the war, 30 months ago. Civilians there declared that persecution of the Catholic clergy and churchgoers by the republican authorities, which began, it was said in dispatches arriving here, with the burning or profaning of churches in Tarragona two and one-half years ago, had not been relaxed in the least after the Negrin government's recent decree guaranteeing religious liberty. It was said not one church had been re-opened in Tarragona up to yesterday morning."

Your readers may be interested to hear that there are numerous other testimonies to the same effect. I myself noted that the Leftists had destroyed every crucifix and cross left in the wake of their retreat from the gates of Saragossa to the port of Castellon. This was true of monuments in cemeteries as well as of altars and shrines in churches.

It was also possible to see the 19 big guns of Russian origin which were captured from the republican armies and were parked for some weeks at Borriol. Much of Gen. Franco's success has been due to his utilization of war materiel that was shipped from France or Soviet Russia and that fell into his hands when it was abandoned by members of the international brigades.

Miss Thompson Is Muddled

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have heard a few people say Dorothy Thompson is a smart person, but in her article in The Post of January 23 Dorothy condemns Germany and Italy for helping Franco in Spain and in next paragrapn states we Americans should help the so-called loyalist government. Her argument that Italy and Germany are wrong to help proves that if we help any side we are wrong as they, and in the same boat, and just as guilty of murder as Germany and Italy.

Since when do three wrongs make a right? JOHN AMERICA.

Miss Thompson Is Clear

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to congratulate you on Dorothy Thompson's article on the Spanish embargo in The Post of January 23.

The case has never been stated more clearly or more forcefully and by her words Miss Thompson has shown herself to be a great American with the true interests of her country at heart. Her article was a searchlight of truth on an issue that the opposition has used every means in its power to distort and misrepresent. ANN NELSON DE SURO.

The Russian Angle

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This question of lifting the Spanish embargo is daily growing in intensity; and since it is tending to divide us Americans into two opposing camps, it is becoming alarming. As Mark Sullivan wisely cautions us, let us keep our heads. May I be permitted to offer these few thoughts for consideration:

1. We are told that if Franco wins, our democracy will collapse. They (the international agitators and propagandists) don't tell us that our democracy will likewise fall if the communist government in Spain wins. The loyalist government is just as much indebted to Russia as Franco is (so they tell us) to Italy and Germany.

2. Since democracies are imperilled by the advance of totalitarian states, how do they (who want to involve us in another war) explain the absolute refusal of such democracies as England and France to aid the pseudo-democratic government of Spain by lifting the embargo? What about the so-called "democratic" Russia? Why is it so silent and aloof? Russia has caused the trouble in Spain, why doesn't it publicly offer to assist "democratic" Spain?

3. The lifting of the embargo by this country will inevitably plunge us into another war, notwithstanding the contrary opinions of Miss Dorothy Thompson and others of like mind. For certainly the many countries favorable to Franco won't be indifferent to the aid America gives Spain.

4. In Spain there are two subversive ideologies engaged in a bloody conflict—Communism and Nazi-Fascism (if you will). Our entrance into Spain will be to help one or the other. Both are totalitarian and destructive of democracy. The only way to keep this country safe for democracy is, I think, not to go over there to fight the enemies of democracy, but to drive them out of this country.

It seems clear to me that if we are to keep out of war, we must keep the Spanish embargo in effect.

A Spade Is a Spade

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What is democracy? The College Standard Dictionary states that it is "government directly by the people collectively." Does this mean the so-called "Popular Front democracies," directly under the control of Stalin? Let's call a spade a spade! So often we hear, "we must defend democracy by defending the loyalists." This is utter ignorance or deceit.

The Popular Front democracies are no more democracies in the true sense of the word than the Nazi dictatorship. The Popular Front democracies do not give people the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, therefore it is not a true democracy, but only cloaked in the name with the intention to deceive. This is true propaganda and I might add that I do not have to listen to either Nazi-Fascist or Communist propaganda to get the truth. Certainly a policy of class hatred is not democracy. Capital against labor is not democracy. Let's call a spade a spade!

Bulls and Bears

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was amused to see the cartoon in your paper for Monday, January 23, 1939. The cartoon to which I refer appeared on the editorial page of the paper and depicts Gen. Franco and Mussolini agitating the "bull," which in this case was Spain.

Don't you think the designer got his animals mixed? In reality he should have used a bear, as this animal symbolizes Russia, and anybody with a grain of interlinear intelligence knows that this country faithfully represents and guides the "loyalists" of Spain.

The Post Impressionist

Mother's Cooking

THE IRREPRESSIBLE TOMPKINS had the floor and held it against all comers. He just bubbled over, partly with good humor, partly with a polite cynicism, but mainly with words, words, words. Said he:

"Wade, I'm tired of sitting mum and letting Col. Jones and Maj. Nutt get away with their biased sidelights on old times. It is not that they are untruthful. It is that they are incompetent to state the facts. Now, I can indorse all they have said—from their point of view; but I desire to file a concurring dissent. For, who are they but quasi-economic royalists, the legitimate heirs of the nabobs, or captains of industry, who were their fathers. Both the Colonel and the Major were born with silver spoons in their mouths, and the little labor they have done has been quite incidental.

"Yes, sir! As laborers in the vineyard I would class them as merely occasional and wholly incidental; whereas I am the original and average cave-dweller. I was born in a frame house just around the corner from where they lived, and came into the world with a pewter spoon in my mouth. Indeed, I've never been more than one or two jumps ahead of the sheriff.

"It's strange about money. Some have it and get it; some haven't it, yet get it; and others never have it and merely flounder when they try to get it. But that's just another story, as the late lamented Kipling used to say.

"To listen to Col. Jones, you'd think old man Kirby furnished rosewood and mahogany for the whole town; if you pay attention to Maj. Nutt, you have a vision of all Washingtonians stocked up with jute bags of green Java and Mocha. Nonsense! My old man never had any furniture that wasn't second-hand and bought his coffee in sealed paper bags, put up in Brooklyn, ground, and by the pound—when he had any. And that coffee was just a shade worse than what I get now.

"I didn't go to the lah-de-dah private academies that coddled Jones and Nutt; I went to what we called the "free-school," the predecessor of our present Public School System, but no more like it than I am like St. Francis. And after school I sold papers and brought the money home to Mother. Sometimes she'd let me keep a nickel for myself.

"But, it's about my Mother I wish to tell you. There was a woman! She ran the house, ran Father, and came near to running us kids. But, Oh! she was good in a practical, gentle, homely way. The kitchen was her sole domain. We boys had to keep the wood-box filled with well split wood; and, if we had behaved ourselves, we might be allowed to dry the dishes; but when she was busy cooking it was well to keep out. And, generally, we kept out.

"Saturdays it was my job to go to market with her, and it was a pleasure to watch her spread her savings until they covered the household requirements for almost a week. She was a careful buyer; she never angered the market women by sampling their butter with her thumb, or with a dime, as some women used to; but she would chaffer with them and talk about their babies and the hard times until they opened their hearts and gave her what she wanted at the bottom price.

Then I had to lug that basket home, and it was heavy. It was so very heavy that I would set it down from time to time. Saturdays we had ham and cabbage, the cabbage cooked in the pot-liquor and tender with juice. That was a feast for the gods! The ham was sliced carefully, for it had to do for sandwiches for the following week and sometimes for an extra supper or two; but the cabbage we revelled in largely.

"Christmas times we had turkey and ham topped off with home-made plum pudding; and, occasionally, Mother treated us to one of her own cakes. That usually marked a birthday or a holiday; and the cake was good, even in the making. I used to stand around and watch her as she sifted the flour, beat up the eggs, put in a dab of butter, added sugar, spices, nuts and raisins and stirred up the batter. Then when she had run the batch into pans and started the baking, what remained sticking to the mixing bowl was mine! Did I lick that bowl!

"Shade of Lucullus! Nothing now can tasted as good as those "leavings,' and when I dream of them now I have to get up and raid the icebox."

Tompkins had finished; but Maj. Nutt got back at him: "Why, you disloyal son! You haven't half sung your mother's praises. I remember your mother's jams and jellies and pickles which she got out for us boys. She used to say: 'All boys are hollow from the legs up; I know I can't fill you, but I'll try! And all you've go to say to praise her is a little about some raw dough! You're a fine son!"

Then Col. Jones took a hand in putting Tompkins in his proper place. "You and Nutt are sissies. All you can remember is about your mother's sweets and sours, cooked and uncooked. But she had one article of man's food that appealed to me—her ketchup. Boy! that was real ketchup! And she'd spread it on bread for me! May her soul rest in peace."

Morals Of The Press

REPEATEDLY IN his lectures on the morality of the newspaper, given at the University of Notre Dame and published by the university, Richard Reid, the editor of the Bulletin, a Catholic publication, complains of sensationalism and salaciousness in American journalism. Sensationalism is a synonym for yellowness, and proof that yellowness is fading out of our press may be found in any public library which keeps old files.

I write from hearsay, but I hope I will not be seriously accused of bearing false witness in recalling an old folktale of the newspaper business to illustrate the point. It is said that back in the days when we had papers that were really yellow, one of them ran a huge head on page one, reading "10,000 Dead!" and beneath it, in very small print, the subhead, "In Brooklyn Cemeteries," followed by a paragraph to the same effect.

BUT IF NEWS is sensational it is difficult to see how a paper can be asked to treat it otherwise. That need imply neither exaggeration nor fakery.

There was a little exchange of words on this point one night during the war, when the first American troops entered the line and Maj. Frederick Palmer, the chief censor, issued orders that the stories of the correspondents must not be sensational, to which Bobby Small, the Associated Press man, replied that the story itself was the most sensational, from the standpoint of American interest, in all his experience.

But I am not trying to avoid the truth of the charge that some papers have been and still are guilty of overplaying sex stuff, particularly in pictures wherein the offenses of sensationalism and salaciousness run together. Mr. Reid says such conduct is an abuse of the freedom of the press, which "may become in public opinion such a danger to the morality of the Nation that suppressing of that freedom will be considered the lesser or the least of the evils." He subquotes John Temple Graves, of the Birmingham Age-Herald, as saying that a free press is not a publisher's right, but his responsibility, and Arthur Hays Sulzberger, of the New York Times, as saying that this freedom is not given to the press, but to the people.

HOWEVER, as Mr. Reid says, advertising has improved in character, and although people nowadays speak more broadly and the printed matter likewise is bolder, I know from experience that editors are much more insistent on accuracy. Therefore I believe there will be a trend toward, let us say, modesty or decency, to anticipate the resentment which he foresees.

It is a question of taste as well as of morals. In conceding that advertising has improved in character, he fails to account for the fact that nowadays papers publish and the people see without question drawings and (in the magazines) photographs of shapely women modeling underwear which would have been considered shocking even in the days when one prominent New York paper ran ads for prostitutes and brothels. The popular boiling point seems to be higher, or perhaps it is that the people are so much more moral—or could it be that they are just blase? Yet, a photograph which passes without comment in an ad in a magazine, if played on page 1 of a daily newspaper on some pretext, would be offensive and would cause protests.

I SUPPOSE much depends on intent and treatment. In the ad the picture has a legitimate purpose, but its appearance on page 1 just for the purpose of dressing the page and selling papers would cause trouble. Perhaps that is one reason why such a thing just doesn't happen in that way. If we use such pictures in the news or feature space, we find a reason—although pictures have been printed which no reason can justify in a press which rebelled against the strip-tease.

But when Mr. Reid gives consideration to a state of public opinion which would abolish freedom of the press he entertains thoughts of a condition in which other liberties would be likely to vanish, too, including freedom of speech and religion. In countries where one dies they all die, and this remark that there is no authority to pass on the fitness of a journalist for a position in which he may contaminate souls is a reminder that neither is there any legal authority to pass on the qualifications of men who claim to represent and speak in the name of God Almighty.

THERE ARE clergymen, too, who have been guilty of sensationalism, misrepresentation and incitation to hatred, disorder and persecution, and while I grant that they are in the minority, I insist with equal vigor that indecent and dishonest papers also are vastly outnumbered by the good ones. I claim that the press of this country can look any other element in the eye.

The Spanish Problem

"Confused And Muddled"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why is America all confused and muddled over the Spanish question?

The causes of this division as to whether or not we should lift the embargo to Spain, and over the Spanish question in general, we can credit in large measure to the "communists" in the United States. They have been carrying on a powerful propaganda under high-sounding names, to deceive the public, operating their Red front movements, of societies under American and democratic names and using every conceivable means at their disposal. They have hundreds of such societies in the United States!

This powerful propaganda has led the American people to believe that the loyalists of Spain are democratic. While as the people are under the impression they are aiding democracy, the loyalists are really working to overthrow democracy.

The Reds have been constantly warning us about Fascism and Nazism, but they never say anything about communism. If they succeed in Spain, their next victim will be the United States. All true Americans should be in favor of keeping the embargo and against all these "isms." GEORGE P. RATTE.
Washington, Jan. 25.

Defining The Issues

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your paper is to be commended for its consistent and courageous policy in defining the issues involved in the present conflict in Spain. You speak for the majority of the American people, as shown by the recent Gallup poll, in demanding the lifting of the embargo on the Spanish government.

Such action on the part of the President or the Congress of the United States would be a major move in the preservation of not only Spanish democracy, but also world peace. SELMA RICE.
Washington, Jan. 26.

International Law

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is incredible that anyone living in the United States and enjoying the freedom of a democratic government, can desire the embargo on Spain to remain. On the mere pretense of keeping America out of war, we are violating the practice of friendly nations and the stand of international law in not helping a legitimate government in a civil war.

We have known for a long time that the nonintervention agreement between the great powers in Europe has been time and time again flagrantly violated by most of the "interested parties." The United States, indirectly, has been an unwilling violator. We have sold war materials to Europe, since there is no reason for us not to, and they in turn have shipped them to the rebels. We have known for a long time that the nonintervention pact was a complete failure to the well-intended desires of Great Britain and France, and yet we have done nothing about lifting the embargo.

The lifting of the embargo does not in any way endanger the well-being of America, because under international law where belligerency is not recognized the legitimate government is entitled to any help from friendly nations. We have not recognized the belligerency of Franco and, therefore, we are perfectly safe and free to sell armaments to the Spanish government.

In my opinion we are not preventing war, but are merely prolonging a greater war when and if the Fascists get control of Spain. ANNE YADGL.
Washington, Jan. 25.

Disgusted With The Post

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is my first letter to a newspaper, but I am so disgusted with The Post of today that nothing will relieve me except to tell you why I am no longer taking the paper and am urging my friends to take the same course.

When The Post gets over its hysterics on Red Spain, when it starts giving both sides of the question, when it stops its biased and prejudiced handling of the news, I'll try it again. I want news, not propaganda; truth, not half-truths; logic and common sense, not hysteria and nonsense.

If The Post prefers to espouse a cause, that is The Post's business. It is not, however, good journalism, and I don't have to read it. I am sorry you have so failed in your mission as a paper. CHARLES A. KERIN.
Washington, Jan. 23.

Helping Fascism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems very strange that we do not take some action for lifting the embargo on loyalist Spain. We have the embargo in the wrong place. An embargo should be placed on all goods used for war purposes, on Germany, Italy and Japan. But loyalist Spain is a true republic or democratic form of government. By placing an embargo on her we are aiding Hitler and Mussolini, who have hired Franco to finish loyalist Spain. GOLD STAR MOTHER.
Washington, Jan. 24.

We Try to Be Fair

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to express my deep appreciation for the fine report of the mass meeting held in the Masonic Temple last evening to lift the embargo against Spain.

I want you also to know how much we, at the House of the Temple, have appreciated your fair and broad attitude toward both sides of this very absorbing question, so vital to the democracies of the world. ELMER E. ROGERS.

Claude Jones, Training School Head, Resigns

Resignation Due to Ill Health; Dr. Root In Temporary Charge

Col. Claude A. Jones, 57, superintendent of the National Training School for Boys, yesterday resigned, effective March 21, because of poor health.

Col. Jones had been on leave since December 27, 1938. Recently he took a civil service examination for the post of warden in the Federal penal system.

Warren F. Martin, president of the board of trustees, issued the following statement:

"At the meeting of the board of trustees on December 22, 1938, Col. Jones raised the question of a leave of absence pointing out that the arduous character of his duties as superintendent had for some time been taxing upon his health and that he had been advised to seek a rest.

"He has since found that a comparatively short rest is not sufficient to restore his health and he must take up duties less exacting and onerous in character than those which he has been performing for the last 13½ years as superintendent of the Colorado State Industrial School, Golden, Colo., and of the National Training School for Boys."

Dr. M. B. Root, the school's psychiatrist and medical officer, has been placed in charge pending selection of a successor.

Red Cross Life Saving Classes Start Tuesday

The District Chapter of the American Red Cross will begin a life-saving instruction course Tuesday, January 31, at the Marjorie Webster School.

Classes will meet from 7 to 9 p. m. every Tuesday and Thursday until 50 hours of instruction has been given. The course will be under the direction of Gordon Sterline, newly appointed director of first aid and lifesaving for the District.

Civil Service

By Ernest K. Lindley

Reforms Effective

NEXT WEDNESDAY the most important civil service reforms in 36 years become effective. They were promulgated by the President in his executive orders of last June. They embrace both a considerable expansion of the classified civil service and certain changes in procedure which look toward a better personnel system in the Federal Government.

As the day approaches, however, the Roosevelt Administration is beginning to feel some of those acute pangs of indigestion from an overdose of reform of which private business has complained so often during the last five years.

Consider, for example, the problem of Frank Murphy, the new Attorney General, who is an ardent supporter of the merit system in the Government service. The Department of Justice in Washington was in pretty good shape when Mr. Murphy took it over, but undoubtedly it includes a certain number of lawyers whom he would like to replace with men of higher caliber or of outlook more nearly in accord with his own. What is more important, Mr. Murphy has set out to improve the offices of the United States attorneys throughout the country. These offices have been left almost entirely to the management of the United States attorneys, some of whom are first-rate men, and others of whom are, at the most, passable political hacks. Their staffs of lawyers vary accordingly.

NOW, ON FEBRUARY 1, unless the President changes his executive order, all of the lawyers of the Department of Justice excepting 20 or 25 policy-making officials at the top, will be covered into the classified civil service. For all practical purposes, Mr. Murphy's hands will be tied. A civil service employe can be ousted in only two ways — by filing and proving charges of incompetence, or by abolishing his job.

If Mr. Murphy wishes to appoint a lawyer to fill a vacancy, he must take him from the civil service lists of those who qualify by examination.

Newly appointed United States Attorneys will face the same problem. And so will the heads of many departments and agencies of the Government who until now have been able to pick members of their legal staffs and many other professional assistants without reference to the Civil Service Commission. Mr. Murphy's situation is especially troublesome, partly because there are so many lawyers in his domain, and partly because he has just assumed his new office and has not had the time to check over and weed out his personnel.

THE ROOSEVELT Administration has filled a vast number of jobs outside the competitive civil service. It has filled many of them with political hacks, but many others with men of unusual ability. It has been a magnet for bright young men of high social ideals and often of exceptional technical ability. Among them are several score of the best men recently graduated by the best law schools.

There is no doubt about the ability of any of these young men to pass the civil service examinations that would be prepared for their respective positions. Some of them, looking forward to permanent Government careers, would not be deterred by all the red tape involved. But others probably would be. The civil service procedure probably would put an end to the temporary borrowing from the law schools by which the Roosevelt Administration has obtained some excellent older men below the level of policy-making officials.

The reforms which go into effect next Wednesday include several which, over a period of time, should improve the quality of permanent public servants. They include relatively flexible arrangements for the filling of professional and technical positions.

THESE REFORMS, however, cannot bear fruit except over a period of time. Meanwhile, the extension of the competitive civil service, which also goes into effect simultaneously, means no immediate improvement in the personnel of the Government, since it "covers in" people who have been appointed already. This explains the relative calm with which some of the most avid spoilsmen in Congress view February 1.

On the other hand, a number of Administration officials have concluded that immediate gains for the merit system are about to be traded away for uncertain gains in the future. They are urging that the executive order be modified. More time could be given for the overhauling of professional personnel. Or department and agency heads could be allowed to continue to pick their own lawyers, subject to finding by the Civil Service Commission that these appointees had satisfactory training and experience for their jobs. There are other possible solutions. One probably will be found, for quite a few reforming New Dealers are suffering from an overdose of reform.

Spain And The Catholics

IT WAS ANNOUNCED this week that the Hitler government of Germany had concluded a "cultural" treaty with Franco Spain.

In view of the stand that a large section of the Catholic Church here and elsewhere has taken toward Franco and, at the same time, of the attitude that the church and the pope himself have taken toward the cultural aspects of Hitlerism, this news ranks among the most important of the week. It is evidence of the serious dilemma in which the church finds itself.

The Vatican committed itself to the cause of Franco at the very outbreak of the rebellion. Franco represented the clerical forces, in opposition to Marxian trends in the Popular Front government. There had been outrages against priests, nuns and church property—very serious outrages. The Vatican expected that the Franco rebellion would be a coup d'tat; that it would be immediately successful and that it would protect the church. Certainly, the Vatican never foresaw or believed that it would develop into an appallingly bloody civil war, and become, in essence, a fight not for or against Catholicism but for or against fascism.

THE COMPLETE FAILURE to achieve real non-intervention in Spain, the open and material support of Franco by Mussolini and Hitler changed the whole picture.

The church is therefore in the embarrassing danger of becoming an ally of fascism, just as the democratic political world by its honestly designed policy of non-intervention has become, in effect, the aid of Franco and fascism.

A large section of the Catholic world recognizes this. An influential section of Catholic opinion in this country is aware that if, in the eyes of millions of people, fascism and Catholicism should become identified it might be very unfortunate for Catholicism in all democratic countries.

And over and beyond this, one must now wonder very seriously what the effect of a Franco victory will be upon Christianity in Spain itself.

FOR IT IS no longer possible to regard fascism as the friend of Christianity. And, in making a cultural treaty with Hitler, Franco has laid Spain wide open to the penetration of Nazi ideology, which has been repeatedly denounced by the Pope himself as anti-Christian.

Fascism has followed a fairly consistent pattern of development. At the outset it used an appeal to Christianity, in order to bludgeon the Marxists.

Having gotten rid of them, it then turns on Chritsanity itself. Hitler asserted at the outset that his regime stood on the ground of "positive Christianity." But he claims for Naziism the right to determine what positive Christianity" may be.

It has gone so far in the distortion of Chritsian ideas as to undertake to re-write the Sermon on the Mount—and a Nazi magazine—Nordland—has called the Sermon on the Mount "the first Bolshevist manifesto."

The Vatican's newspaper in Rome—Osservatore Romano—said of National Socialism, "it is the most inhumane of all heresies. Hitler is true to his role of anti-Christ."

But it is with this anti-Christ that Gen. Franco has just concluded a cultural treaty.

THE AGREEMENT signed runs indefinitely and can only be denounced on a year's notice.

Both sides are to give fiscal preference to the work of their cultural institutions.

The agreement foresees an exchange of students and lecturers, and, interestingly enough, German schools in Spain are to be allowed to follow German methods of teaching.

This would seem to be a concession from Franco, who has previously maintained that only Catholic schools would be allowed in his Spain.

Any books or publications attacking either land, its form of state or its leading figures must be banned, according to the treaty.

And that would seem to imply that Franco must ban the Papal encylical "Mit Brennender Sorge" (With Burning Sorrow) in which the Pope attacked the Nazi racialist principles, which have since been adopted in Fascist Italy.

Actually, this encyclical letter was all but suppressed by Franco. As far as I know, it appeared only in the bulletin of the Diocese of Pamplona.

UNDER THE TERMS of this cultural agreement, Gen. Franco must admit to Spain the works of the chief Nazi philosopher, Alfred Rosenberg, who is openly anti-Christian.

He must fail to criticize the actions of the Nazi regime in continually identifying Christianity with Judaism, and defaming it on this ground.

He must not protest against the deification of the mundane leader, against which the Pope warned in March, 1937.

He must not protest the continued arrest of priests and nuns, their vilification in the German press and the framing against them of unfounded charges of immorality.

It is simply fantastic that Franco, supported by the church, should form a cultural alliance with a country whose official publications have often written of German Catholics in almost the very words of the old American Menace.

IN THE TRAINING camps of the Nazi Party—according to Catholic and Protestant reports—it is repeatedly stated that National Socialism has three enemies: Judaism, Masonry and Christianity.

That is a part of Nazi "cultural" training. It is reasonable to suppose that it will be continued in German schools in Spain, to which Franco is willing to accord special privileges, although he has announced—and his apologists even more clearly—that he would not tolerate any other Christian religion in Spain except the Catholic.

The Catholic Church knows far better than I, who am Protestant, what has happened to the church itself under the Nazis.

It has been revealed by such eminent men as Cardinal Faulhaber, of Munich. It is known that the Jesuit College in Feldkirch has already been confiscated without compensation, that since April, 1938, nearly all Catholic grammar schools have been closed; that Catholic secondary schools have been deprived of all legal rights, and that the Volkische Boebachter, official party organ, has announced, "We are armed and prepared to continue the battle against Catholicism until the final, frightful decision, until the point of total annihilation."

THERE ARE MANY indications that the Nazi Party is planning an expropriation of Catholic Church property in a wholesale fashion. They have already taken an inventory of such institutions as monasteries and convents.

Catholic publications in this country have repeatedly warned that such a procedure was being contemplated. And the Nazis continue to hold in prison the Catholic chancellor of Catholic-governed Austria, Dr. Schuschnigg.

MEANWHILE, there is news from Europe that, once Franco is established in Spain, the countries of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis, with which Franco Spain will be allied, plan a new Fascist League of Nations which will include certain South American countries.

Leaving the religious question, for the moment, out of account, is it likely that the interests of the United States of America will be served by such a league? And what would be the attitude of American Catholics toward such a League?

Profit Sharing

("Senate sub-committee looks into profit sharing."—News item).

Q. You know the nature of this inquiry, do you not?

A. It's Senate inquiry No. 4682, I suppose.

Q. You are eleven numbers out of the way.

A. Well, anyhow, an inquiry is an inquiry.

Q. Our purpose is to look into profit sharing, you are aware?

A. What was that word again?

Q. Profit. Anything wrong with it?

A. No, but I hadn't heard it in years.

Q. Do you imply that as a business man you are not familiar with the word.

A. I do. And would the committee mind if I sat up here with it?

Q. What for?

A. So if you discover any profits anywhere I can share the look.

Q. Is it necessary for you to be frivolous?

A. I'm a business man and if you think any business man is in the mood to be frivolous you're crazy.

Q. This is a friendly inquiry.

A. As a business man I'm too far gone to tell friend from foe.

Q. We are a Senate sub-committee trying to determine whether the government might not well make tax concessions to industries which have profit-sharing systems. Did you know that?

A. No. Whenever I hear of a Senate committee in session I look for the worst.

Q. And have you ever been disappointed?

A. Not so far.

Q. What we wish to do is to bring out the number of companies having profit-sharing systems and get the facts about the profits shared.

A. I didn't know there had been any profits to share in the last seven years.

Q. Neither did we. Have you a profit-sharing business?

A. I think we used to call it that, but we now refer to it as an antique.

Q. How many years since you showed a profit?

A. I can't remember.

Q. Do you regard the profit-sharing idea as a good one?

A. I think it is a swell idea if it would work out the right way.

Q. What do you mean, the right way?

A. So the people who get weekly wages would see that the boss made a living, too.

Q. Let us assume that you are a businessman who has shown a good profit right along. . . .

A. Oh, now I get the drift of this inquiry.

Q. What's the drift of it?

A. It isn't an inquiry; it's a bedtime story!

Bates Prefers Income Tax to D. C. Sales Levy

Latter Should Be Last Resort, New Member Of Sub-Committee Says

A retail sales tax, such as has been recommended by the Citizens Advisory committee and specially employed fiscal experts, should be imposed on Washington citizens only as a last resort, Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, said yesterday.

A new member of the fiscal affairs sub-committee which will draft the new local revenue act, Bates said that he is inclined to favor a graduated personal income tax providing it covers Federal workers.

Bates, formerly Mayor of Salem, Mass., said he hopes economies through the proposed reorganization of the District government will prevent the need for a large tax increase. He also is a member of the sub-committee which will consider the reorganization report.

"I think it is better sometimes to curtail municipal activities rather than increase taxes," he said.

The other minority member of the fiscal affairs sub-committee, Representative Dirksen, of Illinois, for two years has sponsored a District income tax in the House.

Chairman Nichols (Democrat) of Oklahoma, plans to call the first meeting of his sub-committee early next week and to begin public hearings on the tax report almost immediately.

Bankers Plan to Come Under SEC

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—Spokesmen for a large group of investment bankers met today to consider a constitution and by-laws under which they would operate in the trading of securities as an entity under the rules of the securities and exchange commission. The governing committee of the Investment Bankers Conference, which is considering this incorporation, re-elected B. Howell Griswold, jr., of Baltimore, as its chairman.

The session will last two days while the bankers discuss and, it was said, probably act upon a report by its drafting committee, which—in addition to having drawn up a tentative certificate of incorporation and by-laws—has already written a code of fair practice for firms trading over the counter in securities.

At the present time about 7,000 investment bankers throughout the United States are registered with the SEC. Of this number the Investment Bankers Conference has a membership of 1,600.

Pittsburgh Coal Net Loss Is $3,179,765

Pittsburgh, Jan. 26 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Coal Co., the Nation's largest coal firm, reported today a net loss of $3,179,765.21 for the year ended December 31, as compared with a net loss of $1,036,330.34 for the preceding 12 months.

The company said its net loss for the three-month period ended December 31 was $350,682.04 as against $454,518.30 for the same quarter in 1937.

Bituminous Production

The National Coal Association, from incomplete car loading reports from the railroads, estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended January 21 as approximately 8,100,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week last year totaled 7,316,000 tons. The report of the National Bituminous Coal Commission shows production of 7,648,000 tons for the week ended January 7, and 8,030,000 for the week ended January 14, 1939.

Salt Preserves Cream Indefinitely

Harris & Ewing.

Owen E. Williams (upper), of the Department of Agriculture, has perfected a means to preserve sweet cream indefinitely with common table salt. To 100 pounds of cream testing 40 per cent butter fat, 7 pounds of salt are added. When cream is delivered once a week from a farm, enough salt is placed in the jar each week to preserve the week's supply. As cream is added after each milking, it must be mixed carefully with salt and cream already in the jar. To remove the salt, the thick cream is diluted with fresh skim milk and run through an ordinary separator. Williams is shown weighing out salt, and in lower picture Mary Sarber (left) and Luella Dever, Department of Agriculture employes, indicate ice cream made from the preserved cream is pretty good.

Persecutions Are Assailed By Lutherans

Council Closes With Plea by Dr. Krumbholz To Aid Refugees

Resolutions condemning persecutions of Jews in Germany and Christians in Russia were adopted yesterday at the closing sessions of the National Lutheran Council at the Ambassador Hotel.

A plea for the co-operation of all Lutheran bodies in assisting refugees was expressed by Dr. Clarence E. Krumbholz, of New York, who has been called to head the new co-ordinating department of 300 independent Lutheran welfare agencies.

Plans for the World Lutheran Convention in Philadelphia in 1940 were discussed. Representatives from 27 nations are expected.

The resolution declares that "the National Lutheran Council calls attention to the prevalence of a philosophy which in its world-wide manifestations during the last 20 years threatens the very foundations of our civilization.

It denies God, ignores the evil in man, disrupts humanity, glorifies might, and attacks the essential foundations of Christianity . . . It results in the suppression of the inherent rights and liberties of man . . .

"The series of persecutions of Christians in Russia, the evil treatment of the Jewish people in Germany, and other instances that could be named, including political persecutions, are manifestations of the logical consequences of this attitude of mind and type of thinking.

"We, therefore, urge increasing vigilance in America against the ever-widening encroachments of this philosophy . . ."

Electric Output Advances for Week

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—Use of electric energy in the United States during the week ended January 21 broadened a little further after passing through the new year week contraction. Output in the latest period totaled 2,289,659,000 kilowatt hours, the Edison Electric Institute reported today, or .9 of 1 per cent ahead of 2,269,846,000 in the preceding week and was 8.6 per cent above the comparable 1938 figure of 2,108,968,000.

Argentina Tobacco Planting Up 55%

Buenos Aires, Jan. 26.—The area planted for tobacco in Argentina for the season 1938-39 amounts to 45,125 acres, an increase of 55 per cent or 18,147 acres over the plantings last season.

There are more than 150 tobacco factories in Argentina, and it is estimated that the amount per annum involved in the industry is about 300,000,000 pesos. The most important branch of the industry is the manufacture of cigarettes, the annual output being over 150,000,000 pesos, on which the tax revenue amounts to about 75,000,000 pesos.

Greater Leniency in Paroles Urged by D. C. Commissioners

Simultaneously with a call by President Roosevelt for a national conference on parole procedure, the District Commissioners yesterday submitted to the Attorney General a revision of the District parole system under which more prisoners would be eligible for freedom.

The President's conference, arranged at his request by Attorney General Frank Murphy, will be held here April 17 and 18. Its object will be to agree on "desirable standards and procedures" in parole administration and seek "closer co-operation between the Federal Government and the governments of the several States."

All Governors Invited

Governors of all the States will be invited to attend the conference and to appoint official delegates. Invitations will be sent also to Federal and State judges, United States attorneys, State attorneys general, heads of Federal and State prisons and parole systems, police officials, members of the bar, social workers, welfare administrators, public welfare administrators and representatives of the Federal and State governments engaged in parole work.

The District's move toward a more flexible parole system, contained in a bill prepared by Vernon E. West, principal assistant corporation counsel, would place the parole board under an independent budget. At present most of its employes are under the Lorton Reformatory budget.

West pointed out that under the present set-up District judges have the power to sentence lawbreakers from a minimum of one-fifth of the possible maximum sentence, as provided by law, to a maximum they decide as just.

Parole Periods Brief

In many cases sentences range from 2½ to 3 years, West said.

"Since the prisoner must serve the full minimum before he is eligible for parole there is little time left for freedom in these cases," he said.

Under the proposed bill the minimum sentence could not be more than one-third of the maximum sentence actually meted out by the judge. West said this would lead to many additional 3-to-9-year sentences and result in more prisoners eligible for freedom.

Engineering Awards Dip 11% During Week

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—Engineering News-Record reported today that engineering construction awards last week were $49,483,000, a sum 11 per cent below the previous week and 2.5 per cent below the corresponding 1938 week.

This was the first time in nine weeks that current totals dropped below those of the comparable period of the previous year. However, construction awards for 1939 to date, $311,693,000, are 84 per cent higher than in the first four weeks of 1938, the publication stated.

Contest Draws Out Sauerkraut Recipes

Germans Have No Monopoly on This Delectable Dish, It Appears; Swiss and Russians Use It Too

SAUERKRAUT has been hoodwinking a large, trusting public into believeing that Germany, alone, is its native home. Although it has long reigned triumphant as the Teutons' national dish, it took The Post recipe contest to discover that the Russians also have a name for sauerkraut, that the modest Swiss for years have been blending their kraut with beer and mushrooms and that there is an old recipe for sauerkraut, sliced ham and spaghetti dear to the hearts of Amsterdam burghers.

From this league of sauerkraut nations several enticing new blends were unearthed. Here are a few gatherings from both European and old American cookbook entries. Hungarian kraut is a combination of pork, rice and beef wrapped in cabbage leaves, nestling in a bed of kraut and tomato juice. The Pennsylvania Dutch alone mailed in 15 formulas for kraut and fluffy dumplings, simmered in ham or lean pork and touched up with caraway seed, bay leaves, nutmeg or cinnamon. From Omaha, Nebr., comes the idea of a sweet and sour roast, a blending of buttermilk, cloves and briny, fresh kraut. Casseroles of the well-liked sauerkraut and savory spareribs were dished out from all parts of this country, as well as from Bavaria, Hungary and Czecho-Slovakia.

Sauerkraut Zealot

Few kraut fans could be more enthusiastic in their loyalty than Mrs. John Hreachmack, of 1331 Newton street northeast. Although she submitted a variety of distinctive kraut recipes, her culinary climax was a Rhine wine sauerkraut with oyster ragout. So tempting and savory was this dish that her efforts and originality were rewarded with the first cash prize of $3.

Mrs. Hreachmach

Rhine Wine Sauerkraut With Ragout of Oysters

Drain 1 large can of sauerkraut of all liquid. Place in a saucepan with ¼ cup of butter. Cover with ½ pint of white wine, sour preferably. Cook slowly until dry, for about 2 or 2½ hours. Clear a ring in the center of a large round platter filled with the kraut and serve the following ragout in the center: Make a cream sauce from ½ tablespoon of sifted flour, 1 tablespoon of butter and 1½ cup of beef broth. Add a generous dash of bouillon essence, a dash of nutmeg and 1 tablespoon of lemon juice, to taste. Stir in 2 well-beaten egg yolks. Stir constantly. Place in sauce, 2 dozen raw oysters. Boil slowly until stiff and thickened. Add oyster liquor. When hot and creamy, serve in center of sauerkraut ring. Pass pumpernickle bread and apple butter with this.

Appetite Teaser

A relish for jaded appeties is this entry for sauerkraut and frankfurters. It was found so exciting in flavor and novelty that it has been awarded second prize of $2. Mrs. Lyda Allen Smith, 302 Amhurst street Winchester, Va., is the originator of this zestful dish, which takes shape as a cold sauerkraut salad.

Mrs. L. Smith

Jellied Sauerkraut and Frankfurter Salad

Soften 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin in 3 tablespoons of cold water. Heat to boiling 1¼ cups of boiling water with ½ cup of sauerkraut juice, 3 tablespoons of vinegar and 1 tablespoon of lemon juice. Add to softened gelatin and set until dissolved. Add 1 tablespoon of sugar, ½ teaspoon of salt, 1 teaspoon of dry mustard, 1 tablespoon of fresh or bottled horseradish and a dash of cayenne. When cold and slightly thickened, skin and slice ½ pound of frankfurters, arranging them in a mold which has been rinsed in cold water. Add 2½ cups of sauerkraut and ¼ cup of chopped green peppers to frankfurters and pour gelatin over all. Allow to set for several hours before unmolding. Garnish with olives and watercress and pass Roquefort dressing or mayonnaise with this service.

Nesting Fowl

Wild and racy as a roast of young venison is the recipe submitted by Mrs. John D. Parsons, of Rockville, Md. It was considered so outstanding and delicious that it has been awarded a prize of $1. But a rare dish such as Mrs. Parsons' duck smothered in kraut must be experienced. The inviting flavor of wild duck is incomparable when stuffed with kraut, apples and pork and nestled in the kraut.

Mrs. J. Parsons

Duck Smothered in Kraut

Rub the skin of a medium-sized wild duck well with pepper and bacon drippings. Place fowl in a roaster, breast side down. Blanket this snugly with the contents of a medium-sized can of sauerkraut or the equivalent of freshly made sauerkraut. Over the kraut pour 1 cup of water and sprinkle 2 tablespoons of sugar. Cover roaster and cook until kraut is golden brown and the duck is tender. Into the drippings in the bottom of the roaster, stir 1 cup of thick, sour cream. Let this get piping hot. Pour over kraut, serve with brown, braised rice and the following sauerkraut stuffing. Cook 1 quart of kraut with 1 apple, 1 onion and a small piece of lean ham. Remove the meat, use its liquid for basting. Stuff the duck with this dressing and place a strip of pork on top of the fowl for added richness and flavor.

First Course Triumph

Although sauerkraut is often considered material merely for the main entree, Mrs. Mary Doyle has proven that it takes to first courses quite as appetizingly. A prize of $1 has been awarded to this constant contest follower for her pleasant variation of the cabbage theme..

Mrs. M. Doyle

Cream of Sauerkraut Soup

Cook 1 slice of onion with 1 stalk of celery, cut in 1-inch pieces. Add ½ bay leaf in ¼ cup of butter or bacon fat. Add ¼ cup of flour and 4 cups of hot white stock of chicken or veal. Water may be substituted. Add 2 cups of milk. Allow to boil. Add 2 cups of sauerkraut. Cook for 5 minutes more. Season with ¼ teaspoon of salt and ⅛ teaspoon of paprika and ½ teaspoon of celery salt. Strain. Return ½ of the sauerkraut to the soup. The soup is a little thick if all the kraut is left in; however, some persons like the entire amount of kraut left in. Top this soup with slightly salted whipped cream and serve with bread sticks.

Croquettes Hook Prize

Mrs. Mary A. Hook, 313 Douglas street northeast, has won a $1 cash prize on her saucy sauerkraut croquettes. In the most authentic Germanic fashion, she combines apples, pork and caraway seed to give balance to her kraut. Then she adds a rich, mellow mushroom sauce,

Sauerkraut Croquettes in Mushroom Sauce

Cook 2 cups of sauerkraut with ½ cup of finely chopped celery and 1 peeled, chopped apple for 20 minutes. Add 1 large cup of cooked, diced pork. Cool mixture and form into croquettes. Roll in 2 tablespoons of fine bread crumbs, mixed with ¼ teaspoon of caraway seed or celery seed and ¼ teaspoon of white pepper. Roll in additional bread crumbs and fry in deep, hot fat or oil. Serve in or with a sauce made from the following ingredients. Peel and slice ¼ pound of mushrooms. Saute them in 2 tablespoons of butter for 10 minutes. Add 1 tablespoon of flour. Stir to blend. Pour in 1 cup of cream or top milk. Stir and cook for 5 minutes. Add a dash of paprika and salt and a litle finely minced parsley, if desired.

Baked Oranges Seasonable

Oranges are tumbling into local markets at such low prices as 15 cents a dozen. With their price lower than ever before and with their flavor rich and sweet, there should be many unusual citrous fruit desserts contrived such as the attractive one, above. The oranges illustrated are filled with rice pudding, candied, and baked

Citrus Fruits Are Abundant And Cheap at This Time of Year

West Coast Oranges, Lemons And Grapefruit, the Size of Golden Melons, Are in Town

By Alice Clayton,
The Post Food Editor.

BRILLIANTLY HUED oranges and grapefruits will play stellar roles in Washington kitchens within the next few weeks. Carloads of these nutritious and delicious fruits are lumbering into town. From the vast citrous groves of California's San Fernando Valley come navel oranges. Their flavor is unusually mellow and pleasing this winter, and their price is cheaper than it has been for years. Local grocers are beaming with pride over their huge new assortments of inexpensive Texas grapefruit, of Florida juicy sweet oranges and the California navels.

Nature and the Government have both conspired to aid the consumer and the grower of citrus fruits this spring. Crops have been handsome, and with the United States Government working closely with the farmer and the chain stores to help "move" mammoth shipments of luscious fruits there will be no surplus to be plowed under this year. Everyone should benefit under this intelligent new system, and the one to get most enjoyment out of the tremendous lowering of citrus fruit prices will be the homemaker. Now she may build up the health and appetite of every member of her family with tempting orange and grapefruit dishes, with no qualms about lowering of her exchequer.

This is the season to fill your market baskets to overflowing, for at no time of the year are citrus fruits so plentiful or as reasonably priced as during January and February. No fruit is as abundant in vitamins and as filled with eye and taste appeal during the dull winter season as the members of the orange family.

Far greater varieties of preparation lurk in the fragrant pulp of citrus fruits than are dreamed of in the casual housewife's culinary philosophy. A twist of the orange squeezer in the morning or a cursory sprinkling of sugar over the peeled fruit runs the gamut of imagination exercized by too many housewives. Some pleasant diversions from the "easier way" of preparing oranges and grapefruit may stimulate the family appetite for these healthful and inexpensive fruits. Here are a few quick and zestful methods.

Dead-of-Winter Salad

Place several stalks of French endive on each chilled salad plate. Arrange desired number of grapefruit sections on one plate, place strips of pimiento between. Place desired number of oranges on another stalk, with strips of green pepper. Top with fruited French dressing.

Citrus Ice Entree

Serving an ice or sherbet as an adjunct to roasts, fowl or chops is an appetizing and festive looking habit, often overlooked in this country. And preparation of a tart home-made ice is such little trouble in comparison to the air of elegance it gives a Sunday or company dinner. Here is an inexpensive formula.

Grapefruit Ice

Heat ½ cup of sugar and 1 cup of water until the sugar is dissolved. Cool. Strain 2 tablespoons of lemon juice, 1 cup of grapefruit juice and ¼ cup of orange juice into this syrup. Freeze by placing in refrigerator tray or by using an ice cream freezer in the usual manner. Orange or lemon ice is made in the same fashion, with the addition of grated rind to the orange ice.

Appealing Appetizers

next time you feel you must dress up your menu for the visiting minister or an envious next-door

Orange Toast

Mix 1 tablespoon of orange juice with 1 tablespoon of orange rind and ½ cup of sugar. Cut bread ½ inch thick. Remove crusts, cut slices in halves or strips. Toast quickly, spread with butter and the orange mixture. Arrange on baking sheet and return to the broiler oven for 2 minutes. Serve hot with tea.

Grapefruit Cocktail

Mix the following ingredients and serve cold: 2 tablespoons of tomato ketchup, 3 tablespoons of lemon juice, ½ teaspoon of salt, 1 teaspoon of grated fresh or bottled horseradish, a few drops of tabasco sauce and 2 tablespoons of minced celery. Serve in small cups with chilled grapefruit sections.

Orange Stuffing for Duck

Make a plain bread stuffing by melting ½ cup of fowl, bacon fat or butter. Add 1 onion, sliced. Saute until onion is yellowed. Stir in 4 cups of soft, cubed bread, which has been lightly browned. Add the rind of 1 orange, chopped very fine.

Orange Biscuits

After regulation type biscuits have been arranged on a baking sheet, press into the top of each a lump of sugar which has been dipped in orange juice.

Vegetable Holders

Wire office-desk baskets may be used for vegetable holders in the supply closet. They have the advantage of being very easily cleaned: Simply take outdoors and flush with garden hose.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Motherless Girl of 14, Living With Married Brother, Defies Wife's Authority; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married three years. My husband and I are very much in love and have never had any personal quarrels. However, last August his 14-year-old sister (who lost her mother when she was 4) came to live with us. She had been living with her godmother. Every day she causes some sort of trouble. She minds her brother but she won't mind me, and she is with me more than she is with him.

I love my husband, but I can't go on like this. Her father contributes very little to her support, while I have tried to be both mother and sister to her. Shall I send her back to her father or continue to let her make my life unhappy? I don't want to offend my husband because he is very good and kind. But we talk things over and never get anywhere. I am sure you can help me. Sincerely yours,

TROUBLED

DEAR TROUBLED: This is a difficult situation for any young wife to be called upon to handle—since she hasn't been gradually educated, by experience, up to the point of being able to meet it in an offhand fashion. A challenging moral and social responsibility has been thrust into your lap. The girl is just at an age when she would have been ticklish to manage even by two understanding parents who were unselfishly devoted to her and who worked harmoniously together in guiding her aright.

She is in mid-adolescence, invariably a trying time for parents (or guardian) and child. Owing to the powerful biological and psychological changes or developments now taking place in her own personality, she is strangely moody and unpredictable at times, as much at odds with herself as she is with others; just as uncertain, uneasy and unhappy in her own heart as she often causes those around her to be; greatly in need of sympathy, patience, a wise amount of letting-alone and an equal amount of friendly (though tactfully detached) interest on the part of elders in the household.

Youngsters of this age are inordinately sensitive and responsive to the attitudes of those with whom they are intimately associated—and particularly to the attitudes of their governing elders. Where they sense—or even suspect without actual warrant—the existence of inflexible attitudes of cold impatience or resentment, they are almost sure to react with attitudes of surly defiance. It is their way of hiding their real, innermost feeling of dismay over personal failure to please; a thorny protection of their finest feelings.

The adolescent is putty in the hands of the older person who truly understand and really cares, for him, readily conforming to the desired design of behavior. But he is obstinate and unyielding as stone in the hands of the person who (however secretly), regards him as an unmitigated nuisance and intolerable trial. And I think this brings us to the root of the trouble you are having with your sister-in-law.

Whether or not you recognize the fact, I have no doubt that you have resented, almost from the first, the girl's helpless intrusion into your home. You have resented the breaking up of what had been your tidy little design-of-living for two; the constant care and expense she constitutes; the necessity of sharing your husband's attentions with her—anything and everything that her being with you represents. And this she probably senses, or may even know outright. And so while she obeys him in grateful affection for being loved by him, she defies you as her inarticulate way of saying, "I don't like you any better than you like me." She recognizes your grudging concession to her, and makes an equally grudging counter-concession.

Thus, while both of you are victims of unfortunate circumstance, it seems to me that your own ungenerous, un-Christian attitude is making the situation much worse than it need be. The girl is no more to be reproached for having come to live with you than she is to be reproached for being alive. Forces outside her control brought these things to pass. For the time being, she is helplessly dependent upon your charity, and it is up to you to prove the measure of your spiritual worth in dispensing that charity. Shall it be the mean, niggardly and mutually soul-shriveling sort which some wit has described as the "alms-giving of cold charity and colder relatives?" Or shall it have that "twice blest" quality which "blesseth him that gives and him that takes?" The choice is, in your hands; the record is being writ; the girl's well being and your character hang in the balance.

If you send the girl back to her father it will not, in my opinion, be because she is essentially unmanageable; but rather because you were not big enough to meet the challenge that fate has dealt you. It will be because you are too mean in spirit, too selfish and too lazy really to play a mother's role in the life of a motherless girl, just at the age when she needs a gentle foster-mother's ministrations most. M. H.

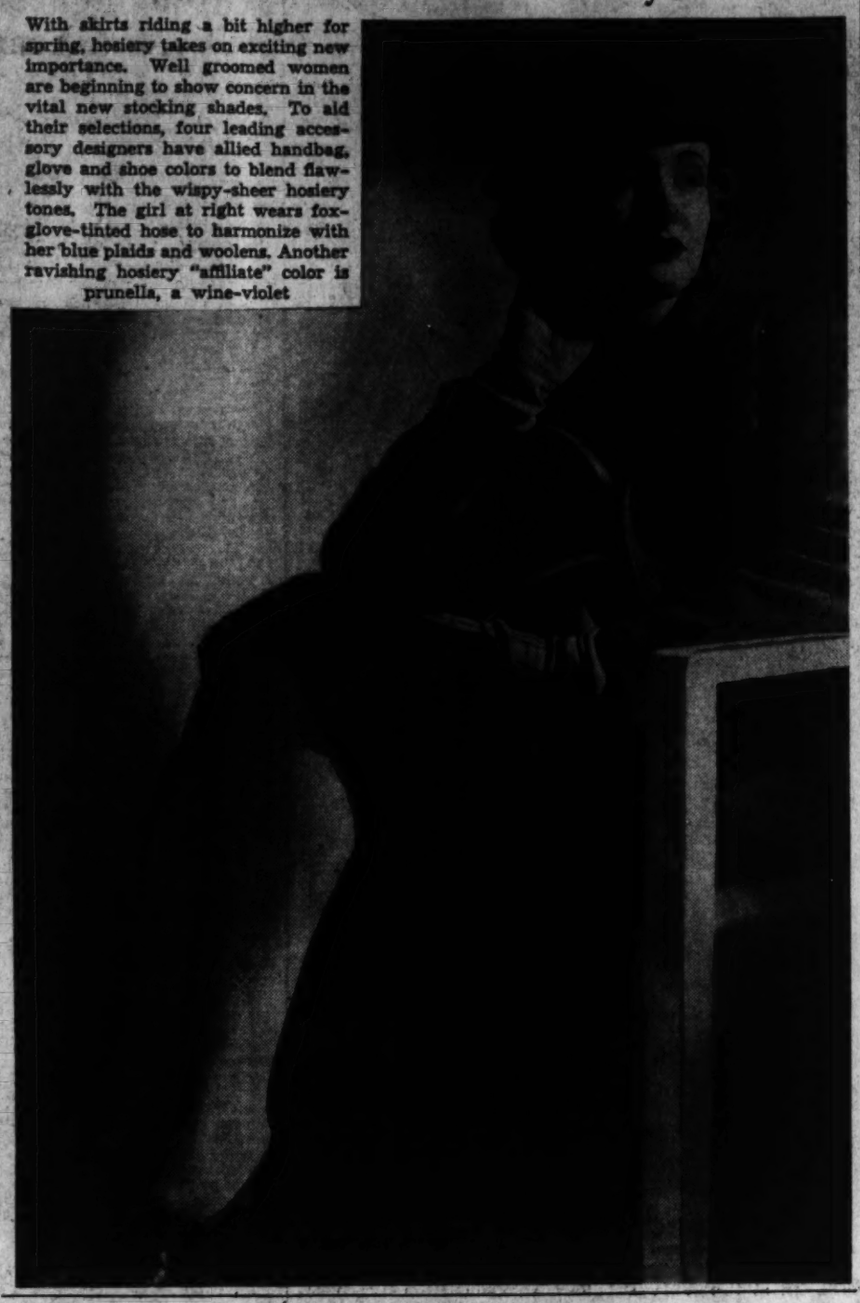
Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

For Ankle-Slimming

Hollywood, Calif.—Bill O'Donnell, director of the "jitterbug" chorus in "Always Leave Them Laughing," at Warner Brothers, recommends three exercises for slimming the ankles. Most important is the rotary ankle movement, first to the right, then to the left. Ankle-bending comes next. The exerciser sits in a chair with legs out straight before her and moves the foot as far as it will go both up and down. Walking on tiptoe in the bare feet is the simplest slimmer and strengthener of ankles.

Color Affiliates for Hosiery

With skirts riding a bit higher for spring, hosiery takes on exciting new importance. Well groomed women are beginning to show concern in the vital new stocking shades. To aid their selections, four leading accessory designers have allied handbag, glove and shoe colors to blend flawlessly with the wispy-sheer hosiery tones. The girl at right wears foxglove-tinted hose to harmonize with her blue plaids and woolens. Another ravishing hosiery "affiliate" color is prunella, a wine-violet



Woman Loses 239 Pounds In 20 Months

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF YOU think you are having a hard time losing 50 pounds or so, it may cheer you to hear about the woman who took a 239-pound load off her feet.

This was the prodigious weight reduction reported by Dr. James J. Short, of the New York Post-Graduate School at Columbia University, in a recent issue of the American Medical Association Journal.

At one time the reducer had reached the 400-pound class, but when she undertook her reducing program she weighed 395½ pounds. In 20 months she brought her weight down to 156½ pounds, which is much more becoming to a woman only 32 years old. Her health improved steadily throughout her program and continued to improve upon its completion.

Supervised by Physicians

While the average reducer has nothing like that amount of excess weight, the report of the case affords a comparison that makes any weight loss up to 100 pounds seem fairly small. As Dr. Short pointed out, it shows "there is no limit to which excess weight may be removed by sub-maintenance diets, provided such diets contain adequate protein, minerals and vitamins, together with a moderate amount of carbohydrates. Fats may be minimal."

This program was, of course, under the strict supervision of the physician. Although the diet contained a wide variety of non-fattening foods, it was extremely low in calories. In connection with such a diet, Dr. Short suggested the use of concentrates to supply vitamins, and skim milk and cottage cheese for their calcium and phosphorus.

In addition to the diet the patient was given thyroid extract, and Dr. Short indicated that the secret of success lay in the correct dosages of this extract. The doses varied in accordance with the patient's total heat production, or energy output. This was determined by mathematical computation. Basal metabolism is often the only consideration in the treatment of overweight patients, Dr. Short said, but it is essential that the area of the patient's body also be taken into consideration in the administration of thryoid extract. This preparation is too dangerous to ever be taken except under a doctor's direction.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Conversation Piece

MRS. HENRIETTA DeGOOFEY, founder and president of the Do Something About It League, has emerged from her post-Christmas seclusion with a brand-new reform. She proposes to renovate feminine vocabularies.

"While as a rule I prefer to devote my reform activities to men," said Mrs. DeGoofey in an exclusive interview to this column, "I feel that the time has come to do something about the way the members of my own sex are talking. I have simply reached the stage where if I hear another woman speak of a 'darling' dress, or hair cut, or dog, or cat, or man or baby, I shall lose all my self-control. I am also tired—and so are a lot of other people—of hearing all men, both in the movies and out of them, described as 'sweet.' I am greatly bored with 'gracious' hostesses, 'charming' women, and 'fascinating people' of all kinds. I am completely fed up with dresses, dishes, people, musical numbers, or views that are 'divine.' I want to hear of no more books or paintings that are 'well done,' of no more houses or children that are 'adorable,' and of no lecture, or lecturer, dinner, play or anything else under the sun that is 'marvelous.' And I want especially to be spared this eternal contemplation of life in miniature—of 'little' bungalows, apartments, dresses, hats, motor cars, couples, manicurists, dressmakers and what-not."

Baby Talk and Fancy Language

"What plan of campaign against these conversational offenders do you plan, Mrs. DeGoofey?" the famous reformer was asked.

"Well, our Do Something About It League is now drawing up several blacklists of feminine conversationalists. First are the Gushers, who I have just described. Second are the Baby Talkers. You will readily recognize this class when I tell you that its two chief passwords are 'kiddies' and 'tummies.' Incidentally, these women seldom if ever have any children of their own, and apparently are trying to forget that they have stomachs."

"What other listings have you made, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"Well, we have the Cute Talkers, the ones who 'All righty' and 'Righto' and 'Cheerio' everybody, and who insist on calling every man a 'chap.' One division of this group also leans heavily on 'O.K.' Then there are the Fancy Talkers who get their inspiration from radio announcers, occasional trips to New York and from visiting Britishers. Those are the ones who say 'bean' instead of 'bin,' 'sayed' instead of 'said,' 'agayne,' instead of 'again.' Now if such pronunciation is natural, I can stand it. But I do object strenuously to the attitude of mind that causes a woman who has been reared to say 'eether' and 'tomayto' to join the 'eyether' and 'tomahto' crowd over night."

"Does that complete your blacklists, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

'Right Thinkers' To Be Curbed

"No, there is one other group, the Goody-Goody Talkers—you know, the 'constructive,' 'worthwhile,' 'right-thinking' crowd. With a political campaign not far distant I feel that special action should be taken in this matter and I have a plan, the details of which I will announce later. Right now our biggest problem with this group is to get them to stop talking about 'ideologies.'"

"What plan of campaign will you pursue with these women, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"We will first use the constructive approach. We want to do things the American way, according to our fundamental concepts of true individual initiative and democracy, and so we plan to offer some very worthwhile awards for effective synonyms to take the place of these highly objectionable overworked un-American words——"

"Just a minute, Mrs. DeGoofey. What will these prizes be?"

"Our league has not yet decided, but you can say for me that they will be simply adorable. The merchants have all been very sweet about the matter and we have some perfectly darling little things that will be grand both for the kiddies and grown-ups. Now could you give me a little ring on the phone a little later?"

"Fine, I'll do that, Mrs. DeGoofey."

"Righto then . . . Bye-bye."

Potatoes Theme Of This Week's Recipe Contest

One of man's oldest and most cherished foods will be the subject of this week's recipe contest. Potatoes, mealy, nourishing and inexpansive, have been chosen as the theme. Novel methods of preparing them have been requested by Mrs. Ernest L. Andes, 1412 Chapin street northwest. She writes:

"There seem to be so few untried methods for cooking potatoes but perhaps we can unearth some. May we limit the competition to the common Irish potato?"

This contest will be confined to white potatoes, but at this point the limitation ends. Any type of kitchen tasted white potato dish may be entered for one of five cash awards. First prize is for $3; second, $2, and there are three additional $1 prizes. Any service, from scalloped or au gratin potatoes to French fried or Parisienne styled "spuds," will be eligible. Mail all carefully written entries to Alice Clayton, The Post Food Editor, not later than February 4.

How to Prolong Life of Hosiery Told by Expert

Rules Outlined to Make 12 Pairs Suffice for Entire Year

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

TWELVE pairs of hose purchased wisely and given the proper care should see a woman through a year of strenuous business life, believes Miss Lucille Smith, expert on hosiery problems. Miss Smith is holding consultations this week at a local store.

"Luxury in hosiery ownership has nothing to do with original cost," observed the attractive New York fashionist. "No fortune is needed to keep the average normally active woman in appropriate and flattering hosiery."

As fabric stylist for one of the country's largest luxury soap companies, Miss Smith has found through personal and laboratory tests that hosiery expense can be kept down to a minimum—within the range of any budget. Here are some of her suggestions.

Fit Is Important

The first step in building up an intelligent hosiery wardrobe is to buy hose of good quality. One first-class pair of a reliable brand will outwear a couple of inferior quality pairs.

"Perfect fit is imperative. Well equipped stores suggest the personal use of their hosiery gauge in case of doubt. With graded lengths and correct full fashioning, there is no excuse for wearing too short a stocking, which will inevitably invite runs. Or too long a stocking which wrinkles around slovenly ankles.

"It is wise to strike one major color preference, such as a soft, clear beige, which will be the backbone tone for suits and dresses, worn from day to day. Buying a favorite stocking in twos or threes at a time, in an exact shade, is far cheaper than eventually being caught short with many hose of odd tints and lengths.

"Hose must be appropriate to the hour of the day and the duties involved. The sagacious buyer purchases two pairs of gossamer-sheer, light-tinted hose for evening, as against ten pairs of sturdier ones for her daily routine of classroom or office. Youthful schoolgirls especially forget this caution. They yearn for dainty two-thread stockings, when they would be more sensibly groomed in four or five thread crepe-twist types.

Gentle Care Urged

"Sheerness of hose often regulates elasticity of the stocking. Elasticity is the life in the silk, which causes them to wear under strenuous sports or work. Competent hosiery representatives are equipped to offer advice about the desired degree of transparency for variously proportioned legs and feet. Lisle hose, for instance, are better for housework or gardening than the average-weight hose

"The care of hose is the most important factor in giving them a long life. They should be washed after every wearing in mild, white soap. Diamond-shaped flakes dissolve quickest and give most thoroughly cleansing results. Launder hose before going to bed each night, regardless of how many pairs stock your hosiery larder.

"Launder hose on the wrong side. This is the part that gathers perspiration from the leg, and this dampness will rot threads eventually. Dip hose up and down in sweet suds and lukewarm water. Rinse in clear, lukewarm water.

"Here is the main trick to remember. Roll the carefully wrung-out stocking in a Turkish towel. This act prevents streaking. Pat hose free of water, rather than twisting them dry in hard knots. Unroll from towel and dry in a room that is not too hot, as this, too, tends to strain the threads."

A Woman's New York

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Our town's huge army of chronic watchers are having a jolly winter, when the weather permits. They have given up staring at the subway excavations to peer at the rapid demolition of the old Sixth avenue elevated. It's coming down fast and by mid-March Sixth avenue will be exposed to the sunhine for the first time in decades. When this great job is done, the watchers will go back to the subway holes.

I hear that the British Vivien Leigh was chosen for the movie Scarlett O'Hara to make Hollywood solid with the British film market, now our second largest screen outlet, as always. I suppose that pick surprised you as it did me, I still say that Freckles Hepburn, Kate the Great of Hartford, would have been wonderful in the part. But now let's forget all about this, and get on with the picture. . .

Sigrid Lassen, the blonde cafe-singing daughter of the raven-haired Princess Ketto Mikeladze, is said to be giving up her spouse, Bertram Michel, after an elopement only last July . . . I hear that Frances Arnstein, who is the daughter of Fanny "Baby Snooks" Brice, is going to take a crack at the movies. Pretty gird, Frances—and so are most of the other Hollywood hopefuls. Good luck, kid.

In spite of the fact that his new show, "The White Steed," was scoring a mighty first-night hit, Manager Eddie Dowling was Broadway's unhappiest man, one recent night. He had just received word from his wife, the beloved Ray Dooley, that their daughter, Mary Maxine, was very ill with the flu. So even though there were cheers for Eddie, he didn't hear them. At latest reports, though, the child is better.

Lady Marler Receives At Brilliant 'At Home'

Washington Notables Come Early and Linger Late in Atmosphere of Legation's Spaciousness and Restfulness

By Hope Ridings Miller

The Post Society Editor.

Washington notables got out their white gloves and calling cards again yesterday and appeared in droves at the Canadian Legation, where Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister, received for two hours.

Judging from comments rippling through the throng at Mrs. Cordell Hull's reception on Wednesday, I thought a number of social notables had made up their minds never, never to attend another "at home," because, as one woman there pointed out, "Receptions like this are so crowded, you're worn out before you get away. I'll never go to another one."

HOPE R. MILLER

That lady was among the first to arrive at Lady Marler's yesterday; and before the party was over, just about everybody else who had vowed to chalk afternoon receptions off their list were among those coming early. Truth is, most of those who wail loudest about "this terrific crush" at any party generally wouldn't miss being there for anything; anyway, the same door through which they came always swings both ways.

As was the case at Mrs. Hull's mammoth reception on Wednesday, guests yesterday for the most part came before 5 o'clock, and many were still there when the last cup of tea was poured. I can't say I blame them for lingering as long as possible. I did myself. The legation is one of the loveliest in town.

There's an atmosphere of spaciousness, quiet dignity and restfulness in every one of the handsomely furnished rooms.

Number of Men Noted in Company

Yesterday, the long, curving stairway was a moving mass of men and women (yes, there were scores of men in the company—tea-time calling is almost as popular with husbands as with wives in the Capital). The second-floor hall, with its crackling open fire and dark walls of carved mahogany, was an inviting place to linger and chat.

Lady Marler received in the large drawing room, where oak-paneled walls minus pictures (and that's restful change, too) served as an attractive background for the huge company assembled there. The hostess was gowned in pencil blue lace, fashioned on simple lines, with a floor-length skirt and long tight sleeves. A double strand of pearls and a white chiffon handkerchief were further accents for her ensemble.

From the drawing room, guests had their choice of turning either to right or left . . . going on into the smaller drawing rooms, before turning back into the hall again on the way to the dining room. The latter also is embellished with handsome woodwork, patterned fittingly, in floral and fruit designs.

The long table, arranged at one side of the room, was loaded with tea-time dainties and decorated with a centerpiece of spring blossoms—iris and jonquils—and tall yellow tapers.

Mrs. Riddell Among Assistants

While the hostess had a number of assistants, none presided at the tea table. The business of "pouring" was attended to by footmen, and women helping Lady Marler did their duty in other ways. On the list were several wives of members of the legation staff, including Mrs. Walter A. Riddell, wife of the counselor of the legation; Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, wife of the commercial counselor; Mrs. Hector Allard, wife of the third secretary; Mrs. Ronald Macdonnell, wife of another third secretary.

Still others assisting were Mrs. Frederick Mott, Mrs. C. B. Crawford, Miss Helen Davis, the Misses Emer and Deirdre Brennan, daughter of the Irish Minister; Miss Eleanor Hawley, Miss Anne Perin and Miss Laura Tuckerman. Also, very much here, there and everywhere was Miss Norah Magee, who makes her home at the legation.

AFTERNOON'S IMPRESSIONS

Mrs. Millard Tydings admiring the landscapes on the walls in one of the small drawing rooms, where a portrait of Lady Marler also was the subject of many favorable comments . . . The Peruvian Ambassador, don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, who rarely goes a-calling in the afternoons, dropping in for a cup of tea . . . Among the members of society vacationing in Palm Beach, Fla., is Mrs. John R. McLean 2d, who, before her marriage not so long ago, was Agnes Pyne Bacon. She and her husband, who is the son of Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, of Washington, were recent guests at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Jay O'Brien at the Villa Del Sarmiento, in Palm Beach

Musicale Given At White House

Mrs. Roosevelt was hostess yesterday at the second in a series of afternoon musicales at the White House this season. Artists featured were Salvatore Mario de Stefano, harpist, and Henriette Bagger Plum, soprano. Mildred Kolb Schulze was accompanist.

Mr. Stefano gave six numbers, including some of his own compositions. Miss Plum's part of the program was made up of seven songs with such famous composers as Saint-Saens, Schubert, Grieg and chumann represented.

Several hundred were in the company assembled in the East Room for the musicale. Later they went into the State Dining Room where tea was served. Among the guests was Miss Jane Sterling, leading ingenue of the "Bachelor Born" company, now appearing at the National Theater in the English comedy by Ian Hay.

Miss Sterling, whose father is a friend of Mrs. Roosevelt has also accepted an invitation to stay in Washington over the week-end to be a White House guest at a supper on Sunday evening. After this extended stay, she will leave by train to join the "Bachelor Born" cast in Cincinnati.

Gen., Mrs. Danford Hosts at First of Several Dinners

The chief of Field Artillery, Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, and Mrs. Danford entertained last evening at the first of several dinners at their apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street.

Guests were Col. and Mrs. John D. van Holtzendorff, Col. and Mrs. Lloyd E. Jones, Col. and Mrs. John B Anderson, Col. and Mrs. Julian F Barnes, Maj. and Mrs. Jay W. MacKelvie and Maj. and Mrs. Rex W. Beasley.

About The Town

—With Dudley Harmon

"Get Out of Town" well might be the theme song of Washington society today. If the cruise companies and resorts, winter and Southern, aren't enjoying a boom, it certainly isn't the fault of the many local folk who are planning to "get away from it all" for a few weeks.

DUDLEY HARMON

Count and Countess de Gramont, of the French Embassy, were going to Canada for some skiing but instead will head in the opposite direction today for a stay at Boca Grande, Fla. Other French Embassyites, the Naval Attache and Mme. Benech, will leave early in February for a visit to Mexico City.

Elsie Ekengren is en route to Sun Valley for the winter sports, after a visit with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hawkins, of Detroit. They were here last week for the oral exams of the State Department and to attend the Cootes-Belin wedding. We also hear that Lee Washington is leaving soon for a stay in Italy.

GEORGETOWN looked just like a Christmas card late yesterday afternoon, with the snow falling on the old brick houses and lights streaming from the windows. A number of people climbed the hill on Thirty-first street to attend the small tea given by Commander and Mme. Benech. A spy of ours who attended the party reports that fires were burning on all the hearths, and that the atmosphere was very cozy after the cold outside. Mme. Benech, who poured tea in the drawing room, wore the smart Frenchwoman's favorite—black.

AMONG THOSE who called during the afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sard, the latter with a corsage of gardenias pinned to her dress; John Caswell, Mrs. Hamilton Bryan, whose sable scarf and muff added an elegant note to her costume; Mrs. William MacCracken, in gray, with a red hat; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lucet, Mrs. William D. Brereton and George Duca.

AT THE SAME TIME yesterday, and also in Georgetown, Mr. and Mrs. Royce Powell were entertaining at tea in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Chambers, who have come here to stay with Mrs. Chambers, sr., in her new house on Twenty-fourth street.

The Powells have done wonders in doing over an originally rather depressing house into a residence which couldn't be more attractive. Their pet story of their adventures in fixing it up concerns an enormous pink bathtub, which Mrs. Powell had ordered. Too large to be wedged in the door, it stayed in the yard for several months, until finally the owners gritted their teeth and had part of the roof taken off so the tub could be let down into the house.

Yesterday tea was served in the upstairs library, which has dark paneling and interesting old furniture. An enormous vase of calla lilies was the only decoration.

Among the guests were Francesca McKenney, in a yellow wool frock particularly becoming with her auburn hair; Laura Tuckerman, wearing a brand new hat, black with green coq feathers; Andrew Wylie, Eugene O'Dunne, Steven Spingarn, Mannix Walker, Dolly Corbin, Max Dunlap, and one or two others.

THE FREDERICK BRADLEYS, Frederick Merrills, and Laura Tuckerman are among those entertaining before the Friday Supper Club tonight; Solicitor General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson will entertain at dinner tomorrow, later taking their guests dancing; Dolly Corbin, off soon for New York, will be honored by Senora de Ghiraldo at a cocktail party on Monday, and Caroline Cecil will fete her next Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett landed on the Manhattan yesterday from Europe . . . And members of the Chilean Embassy staff here canceled social engagements yesterday because of the recent earthquake!

Cocktail Party Here Honors Miss Donovan

Although Her Mother Is Ill, Event Goes Through on Schedule

Though the hostess was unable to be present because of illness, the cocktail party which Mrs. William J. Donovan had planned yesterday in honor of her daughter, Miss Patricia Donovan, went off on schedule and was one of the most successful of the season.

Col. and Mrs. Donovan and their daughter returned to Washington recently after spending several years in New York, and are once again occupying their home on R street in Georgetown. This spacious yellow stone house, with its extensive gurounds, has been leased to a number of tenants in the absence of the owners—among them Mr. and Mrs. Robert, Joyce, who shared it one summer with Mrs. Emory Sands; Mr. and Mrs. Gaspar Bacon, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann, who had it for several months last year.

Among the guests were Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Coffin, Mr. and Mrs. Lammot Belin, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Brooke, and Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn.

Younger people present at the party included the Misses Alice Barry, Jane Acheson, Agnes Magruder, Emily Meyers and Sylvia Alexander.

German Embassy First Secretary, Wife Entertain

The First Secretary of the German Embassy and Frau Tannenberg entertained at dinner last evening in their home on Foxhall road. The hostess wore a frock of black crepe, made on simple lines, and trimmed with touches of peach brocade that formed the short sleeves. A blue and white color scheme was carried out in the decorations.

The Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy, Dr. Hans Thomsen, and Frau Thomsen headed the list of guests. Others in the company were the First Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. de Costa Guimaraes; Dr. Vladimir Rybar, Counselor of the Yugoslav Legation; Mr. and Mrs. M. H. von Pagenhardt; Mr. and Mrs. James L. Wright and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller.

After the dinner the host showed a series of travel films that he and Frau Tannenberg made on a trip several months ago to Florida and Cuba.

Board Rule For Schools Held 'Ideal'

Voteless League Told Educators Should Be in Control of System

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Complete authority for the Board of Education over the personnel of the school system, its budget and the erection of school buildings was advocated yesterday by William A. Carr, secretary of the educational policies commission of the National Education Association. He addressed a forum luncheon of the department of government and education of the District of Columbia Voteless League of Women Voters, held at the Iron Gate Inn for the discussion of whether or not employes of the schools should be included in the D. C. civil service bill.

Dr. Ellis Howarth, of the staff of Wilson Teachers' College, who also spoke, explained the method now in operation, which requires applicants for teaching position to meet certain standards and have the aproval of an examining board composed of members thoroughly trained to pass on their qualifications. Dr. Howarth dealth with the subject from the standpoint of the comparison of the present system, under which educators decide the fitness of applicants, and that proposed under civil service, where they would be passed by a board which had no special training in the educational field.

The two speakers, approaching the problem from different standpoints, appeared in agreement on the advantages of the present plan, in itself a "merit system," they pointed out, over that of placing education under civil service.

Education in a democracy, said Mr. Carr has the unique function of preparing young people to criticize intelligently the institutions under which they live—government, home, school, religion and the economic system. The fact that education in a democracy is universal, that it offers vocational training and other features does not distinguish it from the system in totalitarian state, he declared. The only distinguishing feature is its fundamental purpose. This he believes can not be fulfilled if the schools are subordinate to any form of government but the will of the people.

"The school system should be set up so as to be totally independent of the state," declared Mr. Carr. "The question of teachers under civil service is the same question as was being argued at Munich a few weeks ago. I do not mean, if the schools go under civil service that we shall wake up in the morning and find ourselves in a totalitarian state, but the same isque is involved.

"The board should not have to go to any municipal agency to get its budget approved. The minute it does, you destroy the freedom of the board to conduct its program to serve the basic purpose for which schools in a democracy are constituted."

Mrs. Allen Moore, chairman of education, presented the speakers and questions from the department members occupied half an hour at the close of their talks.

In line with yesterday's discussion, Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, the league president, announced a dinner Tuesday night of net week, under the department of government and its operation, for the discussion of the merit system and District suffrage. Representative Randolph Jennings, new chairman of the District Committee, will speak on suffrage and Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, national vice president of the league, on the merit system. Mrs. Ben McKelway and Representative Hatton Sumner, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, will take part in the discussion.

Dinner Honors Quota Governor

Mrs. Maude Carter, of Newark, N. J., governor of the Tenth District of Quota International, was guest of honor last night at a dinner given at the Women's City Club by the local quota members and a group from the Montgomery County Club. Mrs. Blanche Knight, president of the Washington club, introduced Mrs. Carter, wh odiscussed quota plans for the season.

The Program included songs by Miss Sarah Smith, soprano, accompanied by Miss Mildred Whorton, and a motion picture showing the history of the telephone, and "Ferdinant, the Bull." Miss Smith led the club singing of familiar songs.

There was a short business meeting at which a message of congratulations was prepared to be sent to Miss Sophie S. R. O'Hara, a member of the Pennsylvania Quota Club, who has just been appointed secretary to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. She is the first woman to be named to that office.

Miss Gwladys Jones, secretary of Quota International, was among those attending the dinner last night. The group from Montgomery County, headed by the president, Miss Lillian G. Moore, included: Miss Florence Massey Black, Miss Eleanor Jane Smith, Miss Alice Rhine, Miss Norma Pearson, Miss Edith Hayes, Mrs. Elizabeth Steigner, Mrs. Wilma Enright and Mrs. Helen Bickmore.

Pictures Depict Lions as Friendly In Scenes of Park

African lions as friendly to visitors as grizzly bears in Yellowstone National Park, were shown yesterday in colored motion pictures taken by Miss Helen Lefevre Lyon last summer in Kruger National Park, in Africa. Miss Lyon, presenting the program at the World Fellowship luncheon of the Y. W. C. A., also showed pictures of Victoria Falls, Capetown and the East African coast. She described that portion of her world tour and also her flight from Capetown to London.

Guests of honor at the luncheon were Mme. Bilmanis, wife of the Latvian Minister, and Mme. DeBayle, wife of the Nicaraguan Minister. Mrs. William S. Culbertson, world fellowship chairman, presided.

She was assisted by Mrs. W. H. Allison, Mrs. Arthur D. Call, Mrs. Charles Drayton, Mrs H. W. Frantz, Mrs. S. L. Henderson, Mrs. Ralph B. Kennard, Mrs. McFall Kerbey, Miss Ruth McGowan, Mrs. Henry C. Margaret Blish to Appear At Congressional Club

Margaret Payson Blish, solo actress apd mime, who recently gave a performance of her original character sketches at the White House, is to be the guest artist at at the Congressional Club this afternoon. Miss Blish, who has been called "Washington's own Cornelia Otis Skinner," also appeared there a year ago in a performance of her "White House Portraits."

Tea will be served following the program with the retiring officers, Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, of New York; Mrs. Schyler Otis Bland, of Virginia; Mrs. Harry L. Englebright, of California; Mrs. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, and Mrs. Joe L. Smith, of West Virginia, assistting at the tea table.

Mrs. Edward Burke, of Nebraska, new president, will preside.

Hollins Alumnae Slub Will Gather Tonight

The Hollins Alumnae Club will meet this evening at the home of Mrs. George Daniel, 307 North Washington street, Alexandria, Va. Miss Caroline Stanley will speak on "Summer Theaters."

Club officers include Mrs. Charles Reynolds, president; Mrs. Louis Hood, vice president, and Mrs. George W. Offutt 3d, secretary-treasurer.

Betrothal Told

Mrs. Worthy G. Poe has announced the engagement of her daughter, Margaret Adelaide, to Arthur Melville Vogts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Vogts, all of Laurel, Md. The wedding will take place in the early summer.

Clubwomen Aid Md. Teachers

The Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs meeting in Rockville yesterday, indorsed the action of the Woman's Club of Bethesda in "recommending the new State minimum salary schedule as prepared by the county superintendents' committee on teachers' salaries" and also "equal pay for equal training."

The board went on record likewise in favor of the bill, sponsored by the Maryland Society for the Prevention of Blindness, to abolish the use of fireworks by any but organizations presenting a display as part of a special program.

Mrs. B. Peyton Whelan presided. The meeting was in the Rockville Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. A. Brookhouse Foster, chairman of the student loan fund, reported that $8,890 had been raised since 1927 and that 30 girls had been helped with their educations. Of these, 11 girls who have finished school have repaid their loans, amounting to $2,213 and 9 still in school are not required to start repaying until their educations are completed. Others still are making payments. Each student has four years in which to pay back a loan, without interest.

Kappa Alpha Theta Celebrates Jan. 28

Kappa Alpha Theta National Women's Sorority will celebrate its sixty-ninth anniversary tomorrow, when the Washington Alumnae Chapter will have Mrs. Virginia Davis Boyce, of Baltimore, national vice president, as guest speaker at a luncheon to be held at the Wardman Park Hotel. Mrs. Boyce will discuss plans for the Middle Atlantic district biennial convention, which will be held here April 28-30.

Kappa Alpha Theta was the first women's national Greek letter sorority. It was organized January 27, 1870, by four women students of DePauw University, Greencastle, Ind., to promote intellectual and social development among college women. Its present membership is more than 23,000, of which about 3,000 are active in 65 undergraduate chapters at the leading colleges and universities throughout the United States and Canada.

Women's Relief Corps Fetes National Leader

G.A.R. Organization Gives Reception and Banquet At Mayflower Hotel

Mrs. Rhoda Denny Moss, of Seattle, national president of the Women's Relief Corps of the Grand Army of the Republic, was guest of honor last night at a reception and banquet given by the Department of the Potomac Woman's Relief Corps, in the garden room of the Mayflower Hotel. Martin V. Stone, of New York, adjutant general of the Grand Army, shared honors with her attending as representative of the national commander, Robert W. Rownd, who was unable to come to Washington because of illness.

Other special guests at the head table were James G. Yaden, of the Civil Service Commission, guest speaker, and Mrs. Yaden; Miss Grace Johnson, national treasurer, and Miss Kate G. Rayner, past national president, both of Ohio; Mrs. Emma W. Campbell, of Minneapolis, national secretary, and Comrade John Ryan, of the District G. A. R. Mrs. Bertha B. Brown, department president, presided.

In addition to Mr. Yaden's talk and greetings from the national officers who have been here attending the sessions of the Conference on National Defense, there were vocal solos by Mrs. Alice Deal, accompanied by Mrs. A. W. Hickman, musician of the department organization.

Other hostesses beside Mrs. Burke, were Mrs. Hickman and Mrs. Anna Horn.

A group of members of the Baltimore Women's Relief Corps came over for the dinner, headed by their president, Mrs. Bessie Moersberger.

Four corps comprise the local department. They include Burnside, of which Mrs. Ella Southard is president; Lincoln, headed by Mrs. Mary E. Johnston; Kit Carson, by Mrs. Cleo Usry, and Phil Sheridan, by Mrs. Carolyn Lillie.

Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, daughter of Gen. John A. Logan, was among those who attended the dinner. About 100 were present.

Fetes Planned For Johnsons

The United States Ambassador to China and Mrs. Nelson T. Johnson will be guests of honor at a tea to be given by Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross on Sunday afternoon in her apartment at the Dresden.

This event is but one of many that have been planned for the popular diplomat and his wife. Others to be centered around them this week-end is a tea to be given by Col. and Mrs. A. A. Vendergrift tomorrow afternoon, and a dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck as hosts on Saturday evening.

Ambassador and Mrs. Johnson, who are guests of the former's sister, Miss Elizabeth Johnson, will leave Tuesday to spend a few days in New York. Returning here for another brief stay, they will then be off to Wyoming for a visit, before the Ambassador returns to his post in China.

Alumnae Dance Scheduled Feb. 4

She is being assisted by the chairmen of the various committees—Miss Celeste Howe, patrons; Miss Genevieve Sullivan, tickets; Miss Angela Simone, hall and orchestra, and Miss Ursula Anselmo, publicity and programs.

A partial list of patrons and patronesses includes Miss Mary Adele Baden, Mr. and Mrs. James Colliflower, Miss Mary Cranston, Mr. and Mrs. William Dwyer, Miss Margaret Tappan, Miss Mary Fay, Miss Mary Flynn, the Misses Garges, the Misses Hall, Miss Irma Halloran, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hurney, Mrs. A. P. Kane, Miss Eleanor McGlynn, Joseph C. Michalowicz, Miss May Monogue, Miss Audrey Neff, Mrs. Lewis A. Payne and Miss Shirley Ray.

Junior Board Plans Breakfast Dance

The Junior Board of Commerce will hold its first annual breakfast dance in the Continental Room of the Wardman Park Hotel tonight.

Some of those who have arranged parties and are taking tables are Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Luchs, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Linton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carr, Lyle O'Rurke, Harold Fangboner and Stanley Pearson.

The committee which has planned the evening includes Austin DeWilde, chairman; Edwin Rice, Robert Silverman, William Jacobs, Harold Zirkin, Douglas Devendorf, Claude Nisley, Stanley Pearson and Hugh Nesbitt.

WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, JANUARY 27, 1939

Feeder Roads Idea Backed By Planners

Arlington County Proposal to Speed Traffic to Capital Wins Approval

Washington's accessibility to Arlington County residents, thousands of whom work in the District, would be further improved under plans indorsed yesterday by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission for two new "feeder" roads.

The plan, initiated by Arlington County officials, calls for construction of a circle south of Arlington National Cemetery, near Columbia pike and the Rosslyn-Alexandria road, from which would radiate a new approach to Arlington Memorial Bridge and another to Highway Bridge.

The latter would connect with the Military Road substitute which the county is to build with the $25,000 paid over by Washington Airport. Bids are to be opened Monday for construction of a short strip of roadway which, in effect, constitutes the first unit of the substitute highway.

Road in Bad Condition

It is expected that the Bureau of Public Roads will have charge of building the proposed Arlington Bridge approach, if funds are appropriated, since practically all of it would run across Federal land. At the present time, Arlington Countians who use this route must drive over the Rosslyn-Alexandria (Georgetown) road which is in poor condition, as well as indirect.

The proposed improvement corresponds with the construction of Lee boulevard and its Arlington Bridge link as a convenience to motorists traveling to and from that section of the county.

Opening their monthly session, the planners also approved revised treatment of the sports center-armory project at the foot of East Capitol street, reported acquisition of 144 acres in Anacostia for parkway and flood control purposes, and voted full co-operation with the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission in furthering the latter's territorial expansion program.

Construction Approved

Formerly committed to separate structures for the municipal sports center and National Guard Armory, the commission yesterday aproved their combination in a single structure which could accommodate 20,000 spectators for indoor events, according to Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the planning body.

The building would be erected south of East Capital street, near the banks of the Anacostia River, and directly across the street would be the 100,000-seat stadium.

Plans for this mammoth development have been broached and revised for several years but Congress has not yet given the "go" signal with an appropriation.

The 144-acre tract acquired in Anacostia, together with land previously bought, will make possible the construction of an Oxon Run parkway, as well as flood control work and installation of a new sewer line to serve the valley's residents.

Housing Sites Available

Settle said the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission hopes to double the extent of its jurisdictional territory in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties and its sister agency here will help in promoting the necessary State legislation.

With Chairman Frederic A. Delano presiding, the local body also approved the four low rent housing sites to be developed by the Alley Dwelling Authority and took under advisement a proposal to make certain changes at the Washington Tourist Camp and a request by the District Playground Council for additional swimming pools in the District.

Md. Delegates Agree They Rate Special Car Tags

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 26 (AP).—Delegates voted themselves nifty, special-issue license plates to impress common mortals today.

Amid charges of "dictator" and declarations the House was behaving like school children, the delegates agreed they rated a "mark of distinction" and approved a resolution ordering issuance of the tags by the commissioner of motor vehicles.

The extra-special delegate-model tags will have "House of Delegates, State of Maryland" printed on their faces along with numbers ranging from 1 to 120. Delegates will get car tags corresponding to their number on the roll call, Speaker Thomas E. Conlon getting No. 1.

Pay Increase Won By Shoe Repairers

Month-old wage-and-hour negotiations between four shoe repair shops and Local 136, Shoe Rebuilders and Orthopedic Workers Union, ended yesterday, when a closed-shop contract was signed.

The contract, covering workers in shops owned by David and Hyman Zoslow, includes an average wage increase of $2 a week, shorter hours and an arbitration clause.

Mildred B. Harmon Grapted a Divorce

In Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., Judge Charles W. Woodward has signed a decree granting to Mrs. Mildred B. Harmon, of Hyattstown, an absolute divorce from Elmer A. Harmon, of Urbana.

The petition stated that the couple were married April 10, 1918. Attorney James C. Christopher, of Rockville, represented the plaintiff.

DR. CHARLES BUTTS

Geologist, Going Strong at 75; Calls Word Retirement Horrid

Dr. Charles Butts Starts Biggest Task Of His Scientific Career When Government Forces Him to Leave Service at 70

(The Biblical "three score and ten" has been interpreted as a working span, not a life's limit, by the men and women whose accomplishments will be described in this series. Forty, fifty and more years they have been producing and they're recognizing no "stop" light now. Some of them you must know yourself. Don't keep their names a secret. Let us know your candidates for "Life Begins at 70."—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

Retirement, in the lexicon of Dr. Charles Butts, is something that reduces your income and makes you officially inactive but doesn't interfere with your work.

It caught up with him in 1933, when he turned 70, the age at which Uncle Sam discards his employes, but the last five and a half years have been one of the busiest periods in his geological career. He will be 76 September 18, but what's three-quarters of a century to a geologist, to whom a million years is only a blink in the eyes of time and a hundred million the turning of a fresh leaf in Mother Earth's book?

In 1926, Dr. Butts, then a veteran of 25 years service in the United State Geological Survey, started field work for the herculean task of analyzing that portion of the Appalachian Valley extending into Virginia. When retirement day came, his map was completed but an exhaustive report remained to be written.

That was only a minor detail, however—the retirement, that is, not the report. No sooner was he mustered out of Federal service than the Virginia Geological Survey engaged Dr. Butts to continue his field work and keep at his report.

Today the half-million word text and scores of illustrative maps, drawings and plates are about ready for the printer. The volumes will e published in a few months.

Still Has Much Work to Do

But Dr. Butts' work is not over. Again this spring and summer he will be doing field work in Frederick and Clarke counties. That means climbing mountains, wading across streams, matching the epidermis against scratchy underbrush and guarding against tick bites.

"I suppose I could move along faster 35 years ago," says the soft-spoken white-haired scientist, "but the leg work still isn't so bad. But I have to admit that our field work in Frederick County last year was about the hardest I've ever experienced.

"Climbing up 1,500-foot mountains gave me a real workout. I stood it much better than I expected."

He says his wind and legs are behaving nicely, perhaps because he never has touched tobacco, whisky or beer. Dr. Butts, however, is no reformer on that subject, even though his grandfather was.

"Grandfather," he says, "was a temperance man. He began to crusade against strong drink after observing the effect it had on Indians in his home State of New York. I still have a copy of a speech he delivered on prohibition as a State Senator in the 50's."

A Graduate of Alfred College

Dr. Butts was born in Portville, N. Y., of old American stock. He traces his Colonial antecedents to that branch of the Butts family which came to Boston in 1630. Such an able farmhand was he that he was 27 years old before being shipped off to Alfred College, for which he was preparing himself by home study of Latin.

He received his bachelor's and master's at Alfred and, directly after receiving the latter degree in 1900, went to work for New York State as a paleontologist. Field men from the United States Geological Survey in Washington "scouted" him as a likely prospect and in September, 1901, he was Capital-bound.

His office ever since has been in the National Museum, working quarters of many scientists from executive departments. As a reconaissance stratigrapher, to use the fancy word, he has added greatly to the knowledge of stratified rocks not only in the entire Appalachian Valley but throughout the country.

Dr. Ray Smith Bassler, head curator of geology of the National Museum and for many years a friend of Dr. Butts', points out that his "retired" colleague has something that distinguishes him from most geologists, namely, a thorough knowledge of plant and animal fossils. This advantage has had a great deal to do with the comprehensiveness of Dr. Butts' work in the coal fields of Pennsylvania, the oil fields of Alabama, whose State university made him a Doctor of Science, in Georgia and elsewhere.

Says Retirement Horrid Word

Masterpiece of his career, though, probably will be his report on the Shenandoah Valley in Virginia, covering some 10,000 square miles of its geological composition in a manner which has no comparison.

The thing that gives him more satisfaction than any other non-scientific achievement is his success in finishing payments on his home at 1808 Kenyon street northwest before "retirement" set in. And that his wife, who died a few years ago, lived to see the final installment paid.

Retirement! A horrid word.

Petworth Library To Open

Dedication Tomorrow Of $180,000 Building Marks 10 Years Drive for Branch

Greater learning and richer leisure hours will be made possible for the residents of Petworth by the opening tomorrow night at 8 of the new Petworth Branch of the Public Library, at Georgia avenue and Upshur street northwest.

The library, which will particularly benefit the students at the Roosevelt Senior and Macfarland Junior High School and the 12 other schools of the neighborhood, is the reward of more than 10 years' work by the joint library committee of Petworth. Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Alfred C. Norcross, the committee represents the Petworth Woman's Club and Citizens Association and affiliated groups.

Building Cost $180,000

The new building, built at a cost of $180,000, will open with a collection of approximately 28,000 volumes. Designed by the municipal architect, Nathan C. Wyeth, it is a two-story brick colonial structure containing an assembly room and a children's room as well as the section serving adult readers.

The dedication ceremonies will be attended by Representative Ross A. Collins, chairman of the District sub-committee of the House Committee on Appropriations, and Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee. Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, a member of the Library Board, will preside, and Dr. Bowerman will be the principal speaker.

Will Hand Over Keys

The invocation will be given by the Rev. William J. Sweeney, of St. Gabriel's Church, and the benediction by the Rev. Henry J. Smith, pastor of the Petworth Baptist Church. Miss Charlotte H. Clark, librarian of the branch, will make announcements in regard to the service, and Capt. H. S. Bishop, jr., assistant engineer commissioner, will hand over the keys of the branch to the library trustees on behalf of the District of Columbia Government.

The following representatives of the community organizations will participate: Mrs. Norcross, George W. Potter, president, Petworth Citizens' Association; Mrs. Oscar H. Nelson, president, Petworth Woman's Club; Miss May P. Bradshaw, principal, Roosevelt Senior High School; H. P. Safford, principal, Macfarland Junior High School, and H. J. Smith, president, Georgia avenue Business Men's Association.

Bill May Remove One of State's Six Divorce Grounds

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 26 (AP).—What a husband doesn't know at the altar shouldn't be used against his wife in divorce proceedings according to a bill introduced in the Maryland Legislature today.

The measure, sponsored by Delegate Jerome Robinson Democrat), Fourth, Baltimore, would eliminate one of Maryland's six grounds for divorce—premarital infidelity unknown to the husband.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

William A. Albaugh present Argentinita and her Spanish Ensemble (Antonio Triana and Pilar Lopez, dancers; Rogelio Machado, pianist; Carlos Montoya, guitarist) in the National Theater Thursday afternoon.

Never a rival of La Argentina because of differing stagecraft, Argentinita probably cherishes no envy of her reputation, yet she is well on her way to inherit the popularity of her predecessor. It was never a question of competition between them, for the solo dancer pursues a lonely way, while the essence of Argentinita's entertainment is social. Yesterday's program had not progressed more than a quarter of an hour before the spectators felt that they were guests of a charming hostess whose four friends were assisting her in an informal performance of folk dances. In a member so subtle as to elude description, save as the result of complete camaraderie, the little troupe established an atmosphere of intimacy.

Perhaps it is the unpretentiousness of th edancing that evokes in the spectator a corresponding relaxation of critical attention to technique. For Argentinita and her colleagues have no "interpretative" ambitions, no aspirations toward choreographic ingenuity. Theirs is simply folk dancing done by experts in rhythm and plinat grace of movement, experts also in the aiming of character and in the projection of wit through a gesture or a glance.

The program was a series of solo, duo and trio dances, interspersed with a few instrumental numbers by the pianist and guitarist, both nimble-fingered and rhythmically sensitive. There were dances from various cities and provinces of Spain: Sevillana, soleare, polo, alegria, madrilene, jota, fandango, farruca, zapateado and buleria. Each dnce ws uthenticly costumed from headdress to footgear, and each was kept strictly within its tradition.

These dancers have remarkable poise, a quality best defined as reserve of resources. They never seem to expand all that they could, as though restrained by a sense of dignity. They dance naturally, without affectation, sustained by a spirit of independence. Their artistry is at once spontaneous and scheeled, individual and racial.

Income Tax Boosts Ranging to 6% Asked As Key of $8,530,000 Md. Revenue Program

Proposed Md. Tax Program

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 26 (AP).—Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor's tax program presented to the Legislature today recommended the following levies as sufficient to produce revenue to balance his $95,000,000 biennial budget:

Tax	Estimated Annual Revenue
2½ per cent on net incomes (earned)	$1,950,000
6 per cent on dividends and interest	4,800,000
1¼ per cent on net incomes of corporations	1,250,000
(DEDUCT yield from 4¼ mills tax to be repealed, $2,400,000 total)
Total, income taxes	5,600,000
Motor vehicle titling	450,000
Music boxes	55,000
Beer, 75 cents a barrel	860,000
Recordation of legal documents	235,000
Additional 15 cents a gallon on distilled spirits	310,000
Increased tax on race betting	300,000
Passes and admissions	220,000
Re-registration of motor vehicles	500,000
Total "nuisance taxes"	2,930,000
Grand total tax program	8,530,000

Syphilis Tests Before Marriage, Sought in Maryland Bill

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 26.—Syphilis tests for prospective mothers and marriage license applicants would be made mandatory under terms of two bills introduced in the Legislature today.

Another proposed law provides stricter control of venereal infections and makes it mandatory for attending physicians to report all cases to State authorities.

Jerome Robinson (Democrat), Fourth Baltimore, and Frederick E. Beachley (Democrat), Washington, jointly introduced the premarital examination law.

In addition to the physician's report, a statement from the medical laboratory where the test was made would be required to accompany the application. Results of all tests would be filed in confidence with county health authorities under the bill's terms.

Robinson introduced the bill which requires similar tests to be made on expectant mothers by attending physicians. Midwives would also be charged with responsibility for having the test made by a licensed physician.

The proposed bill would also require birth certificates to state whether the test had been made.

House bill 104, also introduced by Robinson, would direct all physicians and institutions to report all treatment given for syphilis and gonorrhea to the Baltimore commissioner of health or the county health officer. Patients who do not comply with the rules of the health department governing venereal treatment would be reported by the attending physician under the proposed law.

The measure also provides for semiquarantine of the infected patient, and prescribes sanitary regulations for his conduct.

$5,600,000 Yield Estimated From Raised Rates on Earnings; 'Nuisance' Levies Continuance, $2 Auto Fee Also Urged

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 26.—A classified income tax, continuance of so-called "nuisance" levies, and re-registration of automobile operators made up an $8,530,000-a-year revenue program Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor submitted to the Legislature today as sufficient to balance his $95,000,000 budget.

Heart of the program as recommended by a special gubernatorial advisory committee was the classified tax ranging to 6 per cent, which included sharply increased rates on earned incomes and was estimated to yield $5,600,000 a year.

Gov. O'Conor, whose entire reorganization program and unprecedented budget depend on Assembly approval of the revenue measures, gave the committee report his "unqualified" approval.

Three Income Levies

Three types of income levies were recommended. The first would raise the present one-half of 1 per cent flat tax on earned incomes to 2½ per cent, with an estimated annual yield of $1,950,000.

The second would levy a 6 per cent tax on dividends and interest and repeal the present 4½ mills tax to provide an estimated net yield of $2,400,000 a year.

The third would place a 1¼ per cent tax on net incomes of corporations, to provide an estimated $1,250,000 a year.

While individual exemptions under the proposed earned income tax increase would remain at $1,000 under O'Conor's program, exemptions for married couples would be slashed from $2,500 to $2,000.

Existing "nuisance" taxes, which expire this year would be re-enacted under the recommendations.

"Pinball" Tax Disfavored

The recommendations specifically disapproved the tax on pinball machines, which expires April 30, with the comment: "The Governor of Maryland has publicly expressed his disapproval of the licensing of gambling machines, by whatever name called."

Fixing on the motor vehicle re-registration as a certain revenue raiser, the Governor's committee recommended a $2 fee instead of the $1 re-registration fee paid in 1937. Re-examination of drivers also is provided for, beginning October 1, 1940, and ending September 30, 1941.

The existing 10 per cent tax on passes and 1 per cent of paid admissions raised an aggregate of $230,000 annually, of which $78,000 comes from taxes on passes, the committee said, recommending continuance of the tax but exempting non-professional entertainment, including school and college functions.

In addition to taxes, O'Conor's committee made a series of other recommendations on the existing tax structure, headed by one described in the report as "most important of all."

"We recommend," the committee said, "that the State tax commission and the local tax authorities concentrate upon equalization of property assessments throughout the State, to the end that every property owner should pay his just share, proportioned to the fair valuation of his taxable property.

Reassessment Urged

"We recommend that the wise policy of periodic general reassessment, instituted with the creation of the State tax commission in 1914, be rigidly adhered to hereafter."

Citing relief needs, for which Gov. O'Conor has budgeted $5,000,000 a year for the next two years, as the "fundamental reason" for needed additional revenues, the committee continued:

"The taxpayers must realize that State obligations cannot be extended to any degree without precipitating another revenue crisis. Any further increase in State taxes will be extremely unsettling to business and will act as a powerful deterrent to the establishment of new business enterprises in Maryland. . . .

"'We therefore urge that no additional taxes be levied for the next four years unless absolutely necessary and inescapable. The State of Maryland must go on a pay-as-you-go basis. . . ."

Fiscal Bills Introduced, Session Ends

4-Day Adjournment Gives Legislature Time to Digest Finance Plans

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 26.—Dizzy with figures after submission of the $95,000,000 budget and the $8,530,000 revenue program within two days, the Legislature tonight adjourned for a four-day week-end to study the administration's fiscal program.

The session marked the close of the most important week since the legislators assembled January 4. First bills were passed and signed during the week, and the two fiscal messages from Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor defined the battle lines for the coming two months.

O'Conor submitted his budget, largest in history, Tuesday night. The 218-page document was featured by the inclusion of relief expenditures in the regular budget for the first time, a 25 per cent slash in the $1,535,000 request submitted by the University of Maryland, and the abolition of 72 positions in the State roads commission.

Conforms With Pledges

Discussion of the budget had not started formally when the Governor's revenue recommendations, formulated by the commission headed by William Lee Rawls, hit the floor of both Houses today.

The submission of the two fiscal recommendations was the Governor's bid to keep his campaign promise of a balanced budget. His $95,000,000 budget for the 1940-41 biennium was $8,502,000 out of balance on submission; but his revenue recommendations, estimated to be capable of producing $8,530,000, would leave a surplus of income if adopted.

The income-tax foundation of O'Conor's budget-balancing program faces a stiff battle in both houses. Many legislators construed the rejection of a graduated income-tax amendment to the constitution at the last election as a mandate against all income taxes.

The Governor expected the bills for adoption of the budget and imposition of his budget-balancing taxes to be ready for submission to the Legislature when it reconvenes Tuesday.

Two minor bills were signed into law by the Governor to complete the legislative week. The first abolishes the merit system in Montgomery County, and the second authorized the sale of 3.13 acres of land by the Allegany County commissioners to the State roads commission for a garage and storage depot.

Lutheran Board Discusses Need For Student Work

Higher standards in theological seminaries and colleges and the need for a larger program of Christian work with students in State educational institutions were discussed here yesterday at the meeting of the United Lutheran Church's board of education. Mapping of plans for the 1938-1940 biennium was its purpose.

Officers elected were the Rev. H. R. Gold, of New Rochelle, N. Y., president; Dr. F. K. Fretz, Easton, vice president; Dr. Gould Wickey, recording secretary, and Thomas P. Hickman, treasurer, both of Washington.

Dr. Wickey, member of Luther Place Memorial Church and executive secretary of the Board of Education of the United Lutheran Church, reported colleges and seminaries needed $10,000,000 for building programs and to clear indebtedness.

Other members of the staff of the board, which maintains offices at 744 Jackson place northwest, are Dr. Mary E. Markley, the Rev. C. P. Harry and Mildred E. Winston, students' secretaries.

Celler Introduces Bill To Pay Judges More

Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, introduced a bill in the House yesterday providing for a "Permanent increase in salary of the judges of the circuit and district courts." Celler said that because of "inadequate salaries," many men have rejected appointments to the bench.

United States district court judges now receive $10,000 and circuit court judges $12,500.

ST. JOHN'S PREP WINS, 35-22, OVER GONZAGA

Johnnies Halftime Advantage Is 19-7; Favored to Retain Prep Title With Ease

The second-quarter scoring spree of St. John's two forwards, Frank Cady and Charley Batchelder, earned the most prized possession of the basketball season for the claret-clad Johnnies last night at Tech gym, a 35-22 victory over their perennial rival, Gonzaga. Over 4,000 rabid fans, one of the largest gatherings to accumulate at Tech's auditorium this season, kept the walls bursting with noise until the final whistle.

Trailing into the crucial second period by a 2-4 count, the two Johnnie speedsters began setting the ball in the ring so fast the scorekeepers were hard put to keep up. Batchelder pumped the tying points between the cords with a running overhand shot, and Cady contributed a foul shot to hoist St. John's into a lead it never lost.

During that period, Cady, the hottest man on the floor, scored 9 of the 10 points he was credited with in the game, and Batchelder scored all 5 of his points. The strange part of the feat was that Cady has hitherto been considered slow on his fet and Batchelder was in his first basketball game as a regular. He replaced young Joe Corrado, regular forward.

After the second period, in which St. John's tallied 17 points to Gonzaga's 3, there was little doubt of the eventual outcome. The half-time count was 19 to 7, in favor of the Johnnies.

Through the remainder of the game, Gonzaga was able to match St. John's baskets almost point for point. After the third period, St. John's had increased its lead by only 2 points, 26 to 12, and Gonzaga sliced that lead by one marker in the final session.

Though Gonzaga was plainly outclassed in the second period, it held its head up respectably during the rest of the game. Mainly responsible for this was the Purple's flashy forward, Freddy Rice. In the second half he marked up 12 of his 13 points, 6 of them on charity throws. As usual, the defensive work of Buddy O'Brien stood out for the Gonzagans.

Midway through the final period, Coach Gene Augusterfer, of the Johnnies, decided his team had a large enough advantage and sent in second stringers, who did almost as well as their first-string brothers, limiting their rivals to 5 points.

Besides the torrid shooting of Cady, St. John's victory came as the result of the passwork of Jimmy Mulvihill and Joey Gallagher. Each accounted for 7 points, but their best work was on the defensive side.

Despite the speed of the game and the fouls necessarily involved, only one player was exiled on personals. Cady was the unlucky man, two of his fouls coming in the first minute of the game. Several players on both sides were guilty of three personals.

St. Paul's beat St. Anthony for the Little Catholic Prep School title in the preliminary, 22 to 16.

Capt. J. H. Collier Rides Government Horse to Victory in Fault-and-Out Class

Clipped Wings, dependable brown mare owned by the United States Government and ably ridden by Capt. J. H. Collier, proved herself tops over a large field in the featured fault-and-out class in the President's Birthday Horse Show at Fort Myer last night. Clipped Wings and King Rock, bay gelding owwned by Elinor Leh, of Arlington Hall College, and ridden by James Marsh, negotiated the stiff course of eight fences three times, the heights of the jumps increasing 6 inches at each jump-off.

A wicked-looking brick wall set at 5 feet was King Rock's Waterloo on the third time around. After literally twisting himself double over stone walls, post and rails and gates while a howling section of Arlington Hall students rocked the grand stands with their applause, the good 7-year-old son of Sea Rock brought down the top rail of the seventh jump and cleared the next, a tremendous triple bar.

Then Clipped Wings and Capt. Collier went clean on the wall that eliminated King Rock, although he hit the triple bar.

Elinor Leh, King Rock's youthful owner, would have had the mount on her horse if examination week at Arlington Hall had not forced her to apear only as a spectator.

The triumph of Clipped Wings, aptly named daughter of Short Grass—Bee's Wing, is one of innumerable victories she has scored in local horse shows and in the North.

U. S. Randle, of Fairfax, Va., repeated a victory won by his good-looking 4-year-old Randle's Find on the first night of the show, in the road hacks class, when he won the event for hunter hacks. Second was Maj. Gen. Leon B. Kromer's chestnut Jinwich, whose impressive style of bouncing first to the right and then to the left in front of each fence, in order to carefully judge distances, has been winning him ribbons during eight years of show ring competition.

Lady Jack, a 5-year-old thoroughbred mare owned by Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Holman, placed second in the same class after an exceptionally smooth and easy performance over the winding course. Lady Jack is a daughter of the famous stallion, McDonough, who has sired many ring notables.

Class 1, fault and out—First, Clipped Wings, owned by the United States Government and ridden by Capt. J. H. Collier; second, King Rock, owned by Arlington Hall College and ridden by James Marsh; third, Tom Lewis, owned by the United States Government and ridden by Lieut. S. W. Terror Falls Before Tackles Of Nagurski

Capacity Crowd Watches End of Masked One's Reign as Mat Villain

The Golden Terror, toughest of the matmen to show at Joe Turner's Arena, succumbed last night before the football tactics of Bronko Nagurski, former Minnesota fullback, in a bout that lasted exactly 22 minutes. After tossing the masked Terror out of the ring once, and seeing him climb groggily back, the Bronko heaved the Terror over his head again and stood by while the villain unsuccessfully tried to regain his feet.

The largest crowd to witness a wrestling match in the District in some time jammed the Arena's seats. Fifteen minutes before starting time, the doors were closd and prospective patrons turned away because the house was full.

Midway of the feature bout, the Golden Terror's second, also masked, became involved in an argument with a spectator and received a painful gash over the right eye for his pains. He was forced to retire to the dressing room for the rest of the bout.

In the preliminaries, Tommy O'Toole spilled Pete Peterson, the latter a substitute for Chris Zaharias, in 23½ minutes. Red Regan battled to a draw with Dr. Len Hall, Nick Campofreda upset Dutch Schultz in 15½ minutes with a body slam, and Wild Man Zim beat Casey Berger in 19 minutes with a kangaroo kick.

June 17 Set as Date For College Regatta

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—The board of stewards of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association selected Saturday, June 17, as the date for the association's annual regata at Poughkeepsie at a meeting today.

The three faces—for freshmen eights over two miles, for junior varsity eights over three miles, and for varsity eights over four miles—will start at 3, 4 and 5 o'clock (E.S.T.).

The stewards sent invitations to five college navies, California, Washington, Princeton, Wisconsin and Massachusetts Tech.

'Doc' White Fanned Cobb 7 Straight Times And Forced Tigers to Send in Pinch Hitter

"Ole Mose" Factor; District Boy Yanked Into Major Leagues; Helped Win Series

By Walter Haight.

(This is another of a series.)

"Da'pennant, da'pennant, da'pennant, I'se rubbin' yo' gentlemens into da'pennant," chanted Ole Mose, one and only "rubber" or masseur of the Chicago White Sox. It was during the summer of 1906. The White Sox had been in last place during the early stages of the campaign but they were hitting on all four now and were in the midst of a winning streak.

The colored fellow finished thumping the leg muscles of an outfielder and yelled, "Who am next?" A tall, thin fellow sat down on the rubbing table and held out his left arm. Ole Mose scanned his face and said, "I'se had you once befo' today. I'se got twenty-fo other players and I can't be lettin' you git another rub today. Besides it am Mister Walsh's turn on the slab."

The tall, thin player with the long arms smiled as he slid off the table and Ole Mose grinned back and then said, "Yo' likes to get dese rub downs so much, I'll tell yo what I'll do. Tomorrow we opens dat series with dem Tigers. I don't like that dere Cobb man. You'se agoin' to pitch agin him and fo every time yo gits him out, I'se going to give yo an hour's free rubbin.'"

"It's a bargain," said the pitcher.

He Paid and Paid

When the White Sox left Detroit for the swing round the East four days later, Ole Mose had paid off three hours of rubbing due the pitcher and was still four hours in debt. Not only that but this pitcher had struck out the then hard-socking rookie Ty Cobb seven straight times, four in the first game of the series and three in the last.

Furthermore, I'm reliably informed, this pitcher might have been eligible for rubbing No. 8 had not the Detroit manager sent in Freddie Payne as a pinchhitter for Cobb in his final turn at bat. It is

Three Bouts Are Added To Local Card

Larry Anzelone, Furr Signed for 8-Round Bout on Monday

The all-star show Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn is plotting for Tuesday night at the Arena, began to assume definite shape yesterday with the signing of a couple of noncomet clouters for 8-round engagements.

Phil Furr, apparently at the end of his pugilistic trolley ride, x'd the articles for a bout with Larry Anzelone, New York Italian, and Charley Gilley, of Baltimore, signed for bout with Johnny Dube, also of New York. More—two more, will be added by tomorrow at sundown.

Furr has been salaaming to opponents with monotonous regularity of late, giving rise to a suspicion that he is in a tailspin that knows no ending. Phillip has been losing from Maine to California and back again, and not to top-notch opposition, but medium to rare fighters. He appears to be through—definitely.

Anzelone looked none too good against Wilson last week, although he dealt the veteran a sound trashing. He punched hard enough to stagger Wilson, but not hard enough to put him on the canvas. Moreover, he demonstrated that his boxing leaves much to be desired, and therein lies Furr's hopes of winning, for Phil possibly can outsmart him.

Gilley has been here before, and is mediocre at best. His bout with Dube is an even-up affair, on paper at least, and may produce a bit of action.

Flag-Winning Cubs to Get No Pay Raise From Wrigley

Chicago, Jan. 6 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs won the 1938 National League championship, but Owner P. K. Wrigley apparently has decided to pass the dividend on that accomplishmen.

Billy Herman, star second baseman, returned his signed contract today. He will play for less money than he received last season, when he reportedly drew $18,000. The Herman cut may portend a rather general pay-check trimming, for he long has been an established performer and annually the club's No. 1 holdout prospect. He hit only .277 in 1938.

Jim (Rip) Collins, the first baseman who also suffered through a poor 1938 campaign, let it be known he would not sign the contract offered him, emphasizing he was "not to be classed as a holdout." To which Wrigley replied:

"We do not o:er contracts for the next season on anticipation. We reward the men on the work they did the season before. However, if they improve their work, there'll be satisfactory adjustments."

All of which indicates that Wrigley, who doesn't feel too chipper about the way his team dropped four straight to the New York Yankees in the world series, is going to put to general use his basic contract system, giving players certain starting salaries and rewarding them additionally when and if they come through. To date, 12 players are signed, 10 have returned unsigned contracts and 8 have not been heard from.

Schmeling Starts Back to America

Berlin, Jan. 26 (AP).—Max Schmeling, who recently declared he would try again to win back the heavyweight crown, has started for the United States.

Schmeling left Berlin for Paris last night with his trainer, Max Machon. They have booked passage on the Normandie, sailing from Le Havre Saturday and due in New York February 2.

An effort to get another fight may be in the minds of the two Maxes but everything here pointed to a deliberate effort on Schmeling's part to put at rest rumors that he has been sent to a concentration camp and others concerning his health and that of his actress-wife, Anny Ondra.

Warrenton Wins Over Rockville Five, 57-26

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., Jan. 26.—Warrenton A. C. defeated the Rockville basketball team here last night before a capacity chowd, 57 to 26. The locals lead from the outset and were in front at the half, 27 to 14. Frank Tomosko, Warrenton's big 6-foot forward, with 19 points, 9 field goals and a shot from the foul line, was high scorer for the winners. Lee at center for the visitors with four floor shots that hit the basket led his team with eight points.

Hallahan to Minors

Minneapolis, Jan. 26 (AP).—The Minneapolis American Association Baseball Club today announced the signing of Pitcher Wild Bill Hallahan, former Southpaw World Series star of the Cardinals against the Athletics in 1930 and 1931. He had been made a free agent by the Phillies as a ten-year man.

Pastor Looms As Next Victim For Joe Louis

Champion Anxious to Box Man Who Stayed 10-Rounds With Him

New York, Jan. 26.—Although the latest victim of Joe Louis' sleeping potions hadn't yet come our of the "ether," Promoter Mike Jacobs and the Brown Bomber's brain trust went into a huddle today to decide the next tasty dish to set before the heavyweight king.

They arrived at no definite conclusion about an indoor fight in Madison Square Garden in March, Mike explaining it would take "a couple of days" to straighten out details, but it was learned the only hitch in the negotiations was over the selection of an opponent.

In this respect, now that John Henry Lewis is out of the way as a result of the 2 minutes 29 seconds it took Jolting Joe to flatten him and send him to the cleaners lost night, the only heayweights rated as warranting a shot at Jolting Joe were Madcap Maxie Baer, Lou (Novice) Nova, Tony (Date Bum) Galento and Bicycle Bob Pastor.

Since Baer and Nova already are matched for May 25, and inasmuch as a Galento-Louis bout is a natural for outdoors, Pastor is considered the most likely possibility for the indoor crack in March. And if Mike and Louis' managerial staff can become convinced that such a return match—Pastor went the ten-round route with Joe two years ago—could attract another $100,000, you can just about bet the family meal ticket it will be made. Joe wants the match to show he can catch up with the back-pedaling Pastor the next time out.

As usual after a big fight, everyone concerned turned up at Mike's office today for the "hot stove" aftermath. John Henry and Joe both checked in to answer questions for the fight writers, and, of course, to collect for last night's party. Joe's cut of the $102,015.43 gate was $34,413.70, or 40 per cent, or, breaking it down to figures of "one syllable," about $230.98 for each second he was in there pitching at Lewis. John Henry's 17½ per cent cut amounted to $15,056—and lots of folks wondered if the beating was worth it.

John Henry seemed like a man just coming out of an anaesthetic, but the abdicated light-heavyweight king said he had about made up his mind to campaign for keeps among the heavyweights, and wants another shot at Joe—although mercy would dictate otherwise.

"I wasn't given a proper chance last night," he complained. "I did not get a chance to get warmed up. I wasn't hurt at all."

"Did you know you were on the floor?" he was asked.

"No, I didn't."

Foxx Signs for Reported $30,000

Red Sox Slugger Misses Objective of Highest-Paid Star

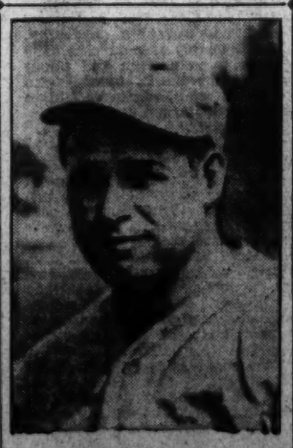
First-Sacker Given Substantial Raise as Reward '38 Work

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Jan. 26.—Jimmy Foxx's 1939 contract tonight undoubtedly brought him nearer to realization of his fondest dream—to be the highest paid player in baseball.

The salary specified in the big the Boston Red Sox, signed today first baseman's new agreement with without fanfare, was not made pub- year, led the American League in batting with .349 and won his third award as the most valuable player in the circuit. After that, he began talking about a $40,000 contract for 1939, and although the hot-stovers don't figure Tom Yawkey went that high, he probably did a great deal better than $23,000.

"Geeme" got about $23,000 last lic, but the experts "guessed" it at $30,000.



JIMMY FOXX

As General Manager Eddie Collins pointed out, "there wasn't the slightest difficulty."

A couple of Yankee clouters, however, probably come between the double-X and his dream this year. One is Lou Gehrig, who had a bad year in 1938, and whose salary doubtless fell to around $35,000 from the $39,000, which made Larrupin' Lou the national pastime's highest paid player last year. The other was Joe DiMaggio, who the experts believe rates more than the $25,000 he got in the last campaign.

But slugging James, contracts aside, figures his "best year" is still coming up, and if he isn't Mr. Big in baseball's salary brigade this year he's still in the running for 1940.

His sinus trouble, to which his 1936 slump was attributed, apparently has clearned up, and when he waves that big willow wand across the plate come summer it won't be any solace to pitchers to know whether Jimmy is getting high pay or playing for fun.

Baseball Scout Deplores Lack Of Talent in Minor Leagues

Ray Cahill Laments Injuries Caused To Prospects by Softball, Football

St. Louis, Jan. 26.—Take it from Scout Ray Cahill of the Browns, the kindergartens look like the next hunting grounds for baseball ivory.

And even there, when you find a prospect he probably will want a bonus for signing, lamented Cahill.

Cahill, who has been around as a scout for many years, said every likely prospect is "sewed up" now.

"When I started you could scout an entire league and buy what you liked. Now it's unusual to find a small independent club. Some major or larger minor league club already has paid for the pick of the players."

Young ballplayers were different, too, in the "old days," Cahill said.

"The most striking thing to me nowadays is the scarcity of good arms. I've scouted many a league without finding a pitcher with a fast ball.

What caused that? I don't know, unless it's softball and football. I know that softball hurts a kid's arm. If a boy ever wants to play real baseball, he'd better stay out of that, because he can't play both.

"Football does things to shoulders and elbows and arms and knees. It's a lucky kid who goes through football without losing too much speed of foot and arm."

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

It was, of course, a horrible mis-match, that Joe Louis-John Henry Lewis affair at Madison Square Garden the other night, but as yet we haven't heard anybody demanding their money back or howling for the New York Boxing Commission to revoke the license of Promoter Mike Jacobs.

POVICH

Yet it was precisely the same sort of a fiasco that brought down upon the Messrs. Goldie Ahearn and Joe Turner the condemnation of Washington fight writers and an investigation by the District Boxing Commission. In New York, Jacobs matches such as Joe Louis and John Henry, and he is still regarded as the Nation's No. 1 promoter. In Washington, Ahearn staged one of those things and is called everything from a pirate to a bum.

We refer, of course, to the Archibald-Mazza affair at Turner's Arena a couple of weeks ago. Mazza is knocked out in two rounds by the featherweight champion, the crowd boos not only the fight, but Ahearn. The gate is less than $1,000, and Ahearn, in addition to being booed, loses money on his promotion.

In New York the other night, John Henry Lewis struck only one blow, by actual count. He scarcely raised his hands to protect himself from Joe Louis and was belted out in 2 minutes and 29 seconds of the opening round. He had no business whatsover in the same ring with the champion. Yet Mike Jacobs escapes all blame, despite the $100,000 gate, and pockets a neat profit that is estimated at $35,000.

Speaking of Bums

The Garden fight was, if that is possible, a worse fight than the Archibald-Mazza thing, yet New York critics are not crying for Jacobs' scalp. The talk is of the invincibility of Louis and the interest he has brought to the ring game. Announcement of Jacobs' next promotion is avidly awaited.

The Washington fight situation is exaggerated to start with. Any time that Ahearn books a good fight, he should be congratulated. The wonder is that he has not staged more bad fights. For the prices he can pay, his matchmaking has been something to marvel at. To an arena that can house only $2,200 worth of customers at capacity he has brought almost a steady stream of champions and contenders.

His critics answer, of course, "Yeah, but who does he put the good fighters in with?—bums, that's who." Well, Mike Jacobs, with hundreds of thousands of dollars backing his firm, didn't do much better, if any. When he threw John Henry Lewis in against Joe, he was sending a light-heavyweight in against the champion and a light-heavyweight who, furthermore, wasn't even a good champion in his own class.

That Local Talent

The absence of local talent on Ahearn's card was supposed to be one of the chief troubles with the Turner Arena promotions. The fight writers and the boxing commission dinned into Ahearn's ears the warning that local fighters must be featured. The poor fellow, in his panic, agreed to do what he could to satisfy his critics. He put Bob Wilson, a local product, into the top spot and cut the prices to his show. Then he awaited results. Results were the poorest gate of the season, less than $450 worth of customers turning out to see the type of show they were supposed to be screaming for.

Ahearn can't be blamed for reinstating his former scale of prices and again turning to out-of-town talent for his feature spots. At least he is willing to take the rap and rely on his own judgment. The business of matching local fighters on his cards in any great profusion is strictly the bunk anyway. There are no local fighters of any account.

There is, actually, no boxing colony in Washington. There may be a dozen or 20 fighters here, but no more. The Capital is not the type of city to be inhabited by prospective fighters. Fighting talent comes out of the industrial towns with large foreign-tongue sections which make up the laboring class. Washington is essentially a white-collar city and the recent ruling that boys who have fought in tournaments as amateurs are not eligible for college boxing has not helped the situation. Young fellows who hope to fight in college stay away from tournaments.

Awaits Outdoor Shows

In the summer time, with Griffith Stadium at his disposal, Ahearn cannot be as readily absolved from blame for his failure to bring attractive fights to Washington. Griffith Stadium seats 30,000 and there is ample scope for his match-making ability. Capital fans have a right to squawk if he does not show them good fights and good fighters during the outdoor season.

But at Turner's Arena, where he is beset by his inability to offer attractive guarantees or percentages, Ahearn cannot be expected to give the Capital top-notch fights. He has never pretended that his indoor fights could be on as high a scale as his outdoor matches. Privately, he will admit that he merely marks time during the indoor season. He makes his money at Griffith Stadium. Yet save for the Archibald-Mazza affair and one other of his 14 programs this winter, Ahearn's Arena shows have been above reproach. In fact, it is surprising that he has such a low percentage of dillies.

Ambers to Fight

George Washington Five Winner Over Colgate by 56-48 Margin

Garber Leads Colonials to Road Victory

Rings Up 15 Points; Clinton Tops Losers; Capital Five Draws Away Near Finish

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hamilton, N. Y., Jan. 26.—Colgate played fine basketball for one half here tonight and led George Washington University by 8 points, but in the second half the visitors put on a scoring spurge that moved them in front and allowed them to win, 56 to 48.

The game really was decided in the first seven minutes of the second half. The Colonials went out and picked up 10 points in that period, while Colgate wasn't making a single point. Garber Silkowitz and Faris were the key men in this upsurge, although Butterworth dropped in one basket.

After that, Colgate came back and was soon actually ahead by 1 point, but Gilson, guard, went out on fouls, and the offense slowed down, while that of the Colonials speeded up. As the game drew towards the close, the visitors put on an exhibition of basketball that was too much for tiring Colgate players.

Colonials Are Ahead

With the score standing at 45 to 43, with the Colonials leading, Borden popped in a set shot for the visitors, Comer dropped in another one and then Hazard, of Colgate, retaliated on a pass from Clinton. Hazard next made a foul, but Borden and Garber came back with two baskets. Colgate was still in the running when Stevenson dropped one. As the game was ending Veltri fouled twice, converted and it was all over.

The superior stamina of the George Washington players won the game. Although the Colonials started with a rush and were soon ahead, 6-2, at the opening of the game Colgate came back, tied up the score and soon moved ahead. The home team offense was working effectively at that time and Capt. Cliff Clinton, the star of the game, was popping in basket after basket.

With only three minutes to go that half, Colgate was ahead, 27-20, and George Washington couldn't catch up. Collins dropped a basket for Colgate and Borden made one for George Washington. Then Clinton converted two fouls. Comer made one foul as the half ended.

Zone Defense Effective

That second half lapse by Colgate—or the superior play of the visitors—turned the game around completely. The zone defense used by the Colonials kept Colgate from getting in close and long shots were not dropping.

Although George Washington won the game the individual play of Capt. Clinton, of Colgate, led the scoring with 18 points on seven baskets and four fouls. Garber, ever dangerous and elusive, was the ace for the Colonials. He was the key man in the last few minutes of the game and he led his team in scoring with 13 points. Silkowitz also turned in a fine floor game.

Chambers Named Duke Track Tutor

Durham, N. C., Jan. 26.—Robert L. (Bob) Chambers, for the past five years assistant track coach at Duke University, has been named head coach of the cinder path sport, Athletic Director Wallace Wade announced today.

Chambers succeeds Carl Voyles, who recently resigned to accept the post of athletic director and head football coach at William and Mary.

The new track coach is a native of Oklahoma, and was a star athlete in three sports at the University of Illinois. Going to Illinois from Grandfield (Okla.) High School in 1925, he was a member of Illini football, track and wrestling teams for two years.

Rockville Five Scores Over Hyattsville

Montgomery Team Wins, 41-11; Ray's 18 Points Lead Scorers

Tommy Ray, of Rockville, kept up his remarkable record on foul shots by collecting 4 out of 5 and combined these with 7 field goals to pace his team with 18 points in their 41-11 rout of Hyattsville yesterday on the winner's court. This win stretches Rockville's current winning streak to four games. After getting off to a bad start by losing their first five games, the County Seaters have shaken off the jinx.

The Hyattsville quint was held to but five field goals throughout the game by Rockville's zone defense. Pranschke was high for Hyattsville with four points.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Jan. 26.—The Lowe-coached cagers of Shenherdstown High School dropped their first game of the season Tuesday night to the Maryland School for the Deaf, by a 32-22 score on the Maryland floor.

The Marylanders took the lead soon after the opening whistle and held it throughout.

Martinsburg Repays Last Year's Loss

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 26.—Charles Town High School's Purple Panthers went down to defeat at the hands of the Bulldogs from Martinsburg High School, 27-17, on the Charles Town High floor.

One of the largest crowds of the season saw the Bulldogs get revenge on the Panthers for defeats of last year.

Mrs. Coolican, Mrs. Kramer, Mrs. Welte Given Golf Positions

Mrs. Lacey Presides at First Meeting; Method of Team Play Again Altered

By Morrell W. Whittlesey.

Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president of the Women's District Golf Association, met with the new executive committee for the first time yesterday at Columbia Country Club and the various committees for the coming tournament season were named with complete changes from the 1938 groups.

The committees that served under Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, Congressional, during her three years as association president, were supplanted with entirely new chairmen and assistants, including an "accent on youth" movement that found Marion Brown and Helen Dettweiler placed, as the youngest office holders on record.

The three major positions went to three prominent members of the association: Tournament chairman, Mrs. Frank Kramer, Indian Spring; handicap chairman, Mrs. V. A. Welte, Congressional, and District team captain, Mrs. Oscar Coolican, Chevy Chase.

The method of team play was altered for the second time, after several member clubs cited they would be unable to place first teams of ten players in competition. First teams will now be composed of eight players, second teams six and third teams, if the clubs care to enter that division, four players.

Mrs. Coolican, active for a number of years as Chevy Chase team captain, and in other positions, will bear the brunt of the success or failure of the new system of team play. Mrs. J. C. Dale, Kenwood, will act as assistant, while Mrs. W. S. Masten, Washington; Mrs. W. B. Jarvis, Columbia, and Mrs. C. W. Griffin, Beaver Dam, will head the first, second and third teams. Mrs. Noble J. Waldron, Beaver Dam, was former chairman of the teams, for four years, and it was her plan that the association will attempt to work out this year.

Mrs. Kramer will succeed Mrs. Lacey as tournament chairman, while Mrs. Welte, handicap chairman for three years at Congressional, will attempt to fill Mrs. C. P. Medley's post of keeping the several hundred handicaps of the members eleven clubs in order.

Mrs. John F. Dowdall, Congressional, a member of the rules body for the past several years, will take over the captaincy of the intercity teams that have matches with Baltimore and Philadelphia carded, and will be assisted by Marion Brown, District and Middle Atlantic champion.

Helen Dettweiler was placed on the rules committee, that is headed by Mrs. S. Whipple, of Washington. Other chairmen include Mrs. John Lever, Indian Spring, who will head the prizes committee, and Mrs. Ed Widmayer, of the newly admitted Argyle Club, who will take care of the year book, succeeding Mrs. R. E. Burks, Congressional.

Mrs. Lacey's selections were approved in their entirety by the executive committee, including Mrs. Gale Pugh, first vice president; Mrs. George C. Roney, second vice president; Mrs. J. H. Bullock, secretary; Mrs. Theodore Peyser, treasurer, and Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, honorary member of the executive board.

The executive committee—golf committee chairmen of member clubs for 1939: Mrs. Ed. Widmayer, Argyle; Mrs. Felix Gygax, Army and Navy; Mrs. George Luce, Beaver Dam; Mrs. Landra Platt, Chevy Chase; Mrs. R. M. Brundage, Columbia; Mrs. V. Simmons, Congressional; Mrs. J. H. Bullock, Indian Spring; Mrs. H. L. Simcox, Manor; Mrs. H. H. Hughes, Kenwood; Mrs. George C. Roney, Washington, and Mrs. Lew Harris, Woodmont.

The new committees: Tournament chairman, Mrs. Frank Kramer, Indian Spring; tournament assistant chairman, Mrs. R. M. Brown, Beaver Dam.

District team captain, Mrs. Oscar Coolican, Chevy Chase; district assistant team captain, Mrs. J. C. Dale, Kenwood.

Second team captain, Mrs. W. B. Jarvis, Columbia; second team assistant captain, Mrs. Lawrence T. Hausen, Army-Navy.

Inter City team captain, Mrs. John P. Dowdall, Congressional; third team assistant captain, Miss Marion Brown, Manor.

Unbeaten Trio Feature School Court Program

Roosevelt-Eastern Game Feature; Western Plays Wilson

More than twice the 1,200 basketball fans who twisted handkerchiefs and howled themselves into a state of hysteria at the last interhigh double-header, is expected tonight at Tech gym at 7:30 o'clock for the fourth twin session of the series.

First game is between Woodrow Wilson's green-clad tossers and the Western club, one of the scrappiest in the interhigh league. In the final, or feature game, Eastern's defending champs engage the hot-handed youths of Roosevelt.

Schedule makers proved themselves no mean prophets when they placed the Eastern-Roosevelt clash in the feature spot. But they didn't foresee the fact that tonight's double-bill would throw into action all three teams still boasting untarnished records—Eastern, Roosevelt and Wilson.

Important Games

For this reason the two games will be highly important for the players, as well as exciting from the spectator standpoint. In the nightcap, between Eastern and Roosevelt, fans will be treated to a stiff battle between the only two teams flaunting a pair of victories. Besides this, each of the headliners came by one of its victories when the chips were definitely down—in an overtime session.

Roosevelt turned the tables on the highly rated Western five last Friday when its tow-headed forward, George West, found himself free from the guarding of Jimmy Horn and dropped a shot from outside the foul line. In the same manner, Eastern's lean center, Lenny Mills, romped in for a snowbird in an overtime with Central, after his bothersome opponent, Ernie Quidley, had been retired from the game.

Both Eastern and Roosevelt have scorers and defensive men rating well above the average. Roosevelt's West and Hymie Perlo have rolled up a total of 33 points between them in the Riders' two games, while Eastern's Mills and "Soup" Hancock are close behind with 28. George Zuras and Bill Robertson are high-class goal defenders, only slightly less dependable than Eastern's Les Cooksey, Johnny Stasulli and Francis Battiste.

Scored Easiest Victory

Woodrow Wilson's one victory was the easiest earned by any team in the series, over a sadly disheartened Anacostia crew. Against Western, the Presidents will be faced by competition as stiff as any in the series. The chance of Moke McDonald seeing action was considered good, the chubby forward having been in uniform for Wilson's last game. His damaged finger has kept him on the sidelines for some weeks. Coach Tony Kupka is allowing the member to heal completely before taking the chance of using him.

The inter-high tangle isn't the only important one in this vicinity on tonight's card, a bitter rivalry between Bethesda-Chevy Chase and Montgomery Blair being scheduled for renewal at the Blair Gym at 8:15. The match will be for the unofficial championship of Montgomery County, Maryland.

Virginia Ring Team Shifted For N.C. Meet

Larowe to Use Bob Bowman; Bryant Back In Heavyweight Class

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 26.—The oldest continuous boxing rivalry of the University of Virginia will be renewed for the fifteenth time Saturday night when Johnny Larowe's Cavalier squad faces North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Dating back to 1925, the Carolina-Virginia series has been unbroken for 14 seasons, and the four Tarheel victories resulting from these meeting represent the largest number any one opponent has scored against the men of Larowe.

The return of Arthur Bryant in the heavyweight class and a change in the 165-pound entry are the probable lineup revisions for the Virginians this week. Bryant, a winner in the opening 4-to-4 tie with Syracuse, was held out of last week's triumph over Virginia Tech in order to give his back injury a rest.

Tentatively named to replace Roy Bowman, Charlottesville sophomore, in the 165-pound class is Edwin Parker, of Richmond, who entered Virginia from Washington's Western High School. Parker's previous varsity experience is limited to one dual meet bout last year, but he is regarded as a capable boxer.

The other positions will be manned in the same order as last week, with Platon Gailey, 120 pounds; Ben Jacobs, 127; Dick Williams, 135; Ashby Barksdale, 145; Truman Southall, 155, and Fenton Somerville, 175.

North Carolina, loser to Citadel and winner over North Carolina State, lists Billy Winstead, a veteran of last season, as Gailey's opponent.

Cavalier Jacobs is scheduled to meet Sam McFalls, another second-year man; Williams' likely opponent will be Andy Gennett, sophomore, 135-pounder, and Barksdale will meet Ed Dickerson.

Carolina's standout middle distance runner in track, Fred Hardy, of Richmond, who turned to boxing for the first time this year, is matched with Southall in the 155-pound event. Parker's opponent probably will be Robert Farris, a sophomore.

Massanutten Swamps Bell Clothiers by 61-24

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 26.—Massanutten Academy's purple and gold basketeers outclassed the Bell Clothiers of Front Royal here last night, 61 to 24. Capt. McElwee and D. Berger, of Massanutten tallied enough points between them to clinch the game. Massanutten led at half time, 32 to 11, and strengthened this lead at the three-quarter mark, 46 to 19.

Blair Host To Bethesda Tonight at 8

Mythical County Title at Stake At Silver Spring

Tonight at 8:15 the gymnasium at Montgomery Blair High School of Silver Spring will be the scene of the first of two battles between Bethesda-Chevy Chase and Montgomery Blair High Schools which will involve the mythical championship of Montgomery County.

The rivalry between these two schools has been marked by many close encounters but in the past few years Bethesda has managed to keep on the top. However, when the two quints clash tonight, the Red and White clad warriors of Blair will hold a slight advantage. In John Norris, leading scorer of Montgomery County, and Donald Tabbutt, one of the best ball-hawks in or around the District, the Blairs have two potential all county selections.

Bethesda's hopes in tonight's encounter wil be bolstered by the return of Pete Smith, a very good shot and one of the surest passers on the squad. Smith has been unable to get into a game since early in the season because of a leg injury.

Johnny Shumate and Jimmy Kinsman, the sparkplugs of the Bethesda attack, will start.

The two schools have had a somewhat similar record so far this season having both defeated Rockville and Georgetown Prep in county competition and have been defeated by Western, St. John's, and Roosevelt in District competition, although Blair's outside record is more impressive.

Martinsburg Unbeaten

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 26.—The girls' cage team of Martinsburg High School remains in the undefeated class as a result of its decisive 32-to-18 victory over the sextet from Charles Town (W. Va.) High School on the Charles Town High floor.

LaFond Names Fernandez as Card Bantam

Rookie Will Replace Messuri in Line-up Against Terp Ringmen

A brand new Catholic University bantamweight will make his debut in the square circle tomorrow night at College Park where the Cardinals and Maryland will indulge in their annual poking party.

He is small, dark-haired Ricardo Fernandez, a Puerto Rican, drafted at the eleventh hour by Coach Eddie LaFond to pinch-hit for Dave Bernstein and Tony Messuri, who were scheduled in turn to defend the Cardinals' honor at that weight and, in turn, ruled out.

This will be Fernandez's first official appearance, although he has been training diligently with the squad since candidates were summoned for training in December. LaFond says the lad has a good punch and is unusually fast afoot and clever with his dukes. He may not be able to overcome Red Dorr's experience, but will give that gentleman, who will represent Maryland at the weight, a hard fight, in LaFond's opinion.

Meanwhile, both teams are scheduled to finish training for the annual duel this afternoon, and both are reported in excellent condition. Little more than limbering-up exercises are on today's program, as both coaches are studiously guarding against last-minute injuries. Maryland's scales were thoroughly tested and approved yesterday to preclude any possible error in weights, and the boys will weigh in officially tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Mt. Rainier High Downs County Foe

Mount Rainier High remained unbeaten against Prince Georges County foes by trouncing Maryland Park High, 53-12, last night in the winners' gym. Coach Wilkinson's charges also hold victories over Laurel and Bladensburg, and on comparative scores, are far better than Hyattsville.

Minus a regular and substitute, due to illness, the winners only had eight men, but were never in difficulty, leading 23-7 at half time and 35-8 at the third quarter before an 18-point spree in the final quarter boosted the margin to 41 points. Chuck O'Connor was high with 16 points. The losers 12 points were divided between seven players.

Easy Mon, Favorite, Second; Boston Lad Is Third in Sprint; Marogay Scores

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 26.—Pause, a daughter of Wise Counsellor that inherited some of her sire's famous speed, eked out a nose triumph for Owner-Trainer John Hazza in the Royal Palm Purse, 7-furlong headline attraction here this afternoon. Easy Mon, favorite in the field of 10 3-year-olds and possibly Warren Wright's chief reliance for the $20,000 Flamingo Stakes, barely failed to hold a narrow advantage while in rather close quarters through the exciting drive to the wire. A. E. Silver's Boston Lad was a belated third, 2 lengths behind.

The redoubtable Don Meade again inserted himself into the spotlight by scoring his second winner of the card and his twenty-ninth of the meeting astride Pause and then brought Seed home for win No. 3 in the day's finale. The filly was a $13.30 for two shot and stepped home in 1:24 1-5.

Pause, incidentally, has been disqualified before for bearing over on a rival in the closing strides. However, Meade did not let her bother Easy Mon enough to merit a claim of foul, and backers of the winner had no cause for apprehension once the photo decision was known.

Gridine, a shifty compaigner last fall, returned to action with plenty of speed in the feature. He disposed of Travel Agent early, but could not match the speed of Easy Mon when that fellow drew up to dispute the issue around the bend. Pause also ran past Gridine before the home turn and fought it out with the favorite through the stretch. It was not until the last stride that Meade succeeded in shoving the filly's nose in front of the game Easy Mon. The latter was the fifth beaten choice in six races.

Favorite players could see only one horse to wager on in the 3-furlong "baby" race that opened the program. W. C. Stroube's Exarch, a newcomer that had shown high speed in the morning trials, was backed with unusual confidence, especially in view of the fact that the colt had Eddie Arcaro on his back. But the "good thing" failed to make good at odds of 6 to 5. Exarch, racing somewhat greenly, had to be satisfied with third money.

The winner turned up in Marogay, $6.70 for $2 second choice. Running back to his promising initial effort, the Stimulus colt made his pace and scored by a length and a half in the fats time of :33 2-5. Town Boy chased the victor home, while lasting to beat the forward running Exarch by a head.

Adding another triple to his total winners at the meeting, Don Meade piloted the consistent Seed to a length and a half triumph in the nightcap. This was meade's thirtieth success in 14 days here. San Antioca was second and Uvalde third.

Hialeah Park, Jan. 26.

Dear Al.

Following the release of the Widener Cup declarations which left 37 thoroughbreds of the original 78 nominations still eligible for the mile and one-quarter stake at Hialeah Park, Saturday, March 4, Frank Shannon, New York betting commissioner, has announced his first set of prices. Shannon makes Sambuel D. Riddle's War Admiral a 2-to-1 choice in his future book. Maxwell Howard's Stagehand is listed at 5 to 1. Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart's Pasteurized and Warren Wright's Bull Lea are highly respected, being quoted third choices at 6 to 1. Herbert Woolf's Kentucky Derby winner, Lawrin, is priced at 8 to 1. The other candidates are listed up to 200 to 1. With the weights out and the field narrowed down to "live horse," Hialeath patrons can now look forward to seeing the top-notchers in action in various preliminary races leading up to the Widener Cup. A glimpse at the morning workout sheets discloses that a number of the ranking thoroughbreds are ready to engage in actual combat. War Admiral, Pasteurized, Co-Sport and False Point are the latest to be clocked in morning trials. The "Admiral" worked a mile breezing this week morning in the fractional time of 0:48 3-5 for the half, three-quarters in 1:13 3-5 and a mile in 1:40 2-5. The son of Man o' War was schooled from the barrier. Jockey Wayne Wright was up. Pasteurized was sent a quarter in 0:22 3-5, three eights in 0:33 4-5 a half in 0:45 4-5, five-eighths in 0:58 4-5 and eased up three-quarters in 1:12 and seven furlongs in 1:26 3-5. Co-Sport stepped three-quarters in 0:23 2-5, 0:47 3-5 and 1:13 1-5, handily. False Point was timed three-quarters from the barrier in 0:48 2-5 and 1:14 3-5, driving. Following is a complete list of the odds quoted by Shannon on the Widener eligibles: War Admiral, 2-1; Stagehand, 5-1; Bul lLea, 6-1; Pasteurized, 6-1; Lawrin, 8-1; Sir Damion, 10-1; Count Morse, 20-1; Court Scandal, 20-1; Maeda, 20-1; Maedic, 20-1 Mythical King, 20-1; Rodbreast, 20-1; Sandy Boot, 20-1; Sickle T, 20-1; Roll and Toss, 40-1; Thanksgiving, 40-1; Volitant, 40-1; Xavier, 50-1; Zevson, 50-1; Cardinalis, 100-1; Cattistock, 100-1; Co-Sport, 100-1; Pernie, 100-1; Rougish Girl, 100-1; Sun Power, 100-1; Warlaine, 100-1; The Whale, 100-1; False Point, 200-1; Francesco, 200-1; Oversight, 200-1; Toddy Weed, 200-1; Windup, 200-1.

Clocker Mike was tearing his hair when Inviting and Pause won for the Benningites at long odds. He put his $10 to win and the some third on Petit Jean and the filly ended up in last position. His bank roll has dwindled to $333.30 and he's going right back for more tomorrow. Mike is putting $10 to win and $15 to place on Continuity, and he says this one is something good to eat.

BILL.

First race—Black Arrow has a bit of class that will prove useful in the day's opener. Don Meade has been named as the overnight rider and I'm going to string along. Notice Me can better that last considerably and is dropping down in this field. Graeme Cracker is a possibility in company of this sort.

Second race — Saunderstown seems the best of these sprinters despite an assignment of 115 pounds. Has worked well and deserves the top ranking. Tuttlcurlo was not shipped here for the ride and could surprise. Knowing for the show end.

Third race — Continuity, with meade to do the riding, appears nicely placed in this field. The mare was never better and has been running in tough luck. I look for big things. Foxton breaks off the rail and looms as a serious contender. Taunton is cheap but the mile and a quarter gives this one a chance.

Fourth race—Blue Marvel may be the right one here. This one has a high speed figure and with Peters aboard I look for improvement over that first outing hereabouts. Black River and Faust should fill out the money bracket.

Fifth race—I'm going to give Star of Padula another chance. Dabson is slated for the saddle duties and I look for a smashing effort. Joharie is fit and ready for the best. Harp Weaver, with Arcaro up, could be a serious factor.

Sixth race—Dnieper was scratched the other day to await a test of this sort and gets in with a feather assignment. I see no reason for mistakes. Don Creole, a Mead mount, figures to be close. Co-Sport to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Jest Once has turned in some brisk workouts and has encouraging races as recommendations for this. General Howes, with Arcaro up, is the one to beat. Top Queen can better that last a little and may be prominent.

Eighth race—Meade has won more than half of the eighth races since the meeting opened. He will stay to ride Town Car tomorrow. I understand. Wild Count and Foreign Legion will battle it out if Meade fails us.

Best bet—Continuity.

28 Eligible For Hialeah Test Tomorrow

$5,000 Stake Booked For Turf Course at Florida Racing Plant

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hialeah, Fla., Jan. 26.—America's richest stake race over a grass course is scheduled for Joseph E. Widener's beauteous Hialeah Park Saturday with a value of $5,000 added.

The Miami Beach Handicap, formerly run on the main course, drew a list of 28 nominations to include many of the higher-bracketed horses in training here.

Because of the popularity and glamour which turf racing has assumed at Hialeah, it was President Widener's desire to attract the better grade of thoroughbreds. He, therefore, announced the Miami Beach Handicap as one of the 11 stake feaures to be run during the meeting.

At a mile and one-sixteenth for 3-year-olds and upward the Miami Beach has drawn among others, eight candidates for the $50,000 added Widener Cup on March 4 These include Calumet Farm's Count Morse, Darby Dan Farm's Maedic, J. D. Norris' Sandy Boot. M. Stuart's Court Scandal and Mrs. B. F. Whitaker's Sickle T.

Other Nominators

Other nominators include Mrs. Charles S. Bromley, Brooks And Croan, Foxcatcher Farms, Ken Kling, Larch Hill Stable, Michael Leon, W. Maloney, Townsend B. Martin, Joseph Pep, Mrs. Kirby Ramsey, F. Santiago, Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart, B. F. Whitaker and Woolford Farm.

Trainer George Phillips leads off with three nominees for the Maemere establishment—Go Home, Maedic and Maeriel.

Kelley has named two. Cardinalis and Count Valiant, likewise Norris with Strolling By and Sandy Boot, and the Woolford Farm with Joe Schenck and Robert L. both recent winners.

Hialeah's grass course runs parallel to the main track and is located in the infield. The distance around is 1 mile and 80 yards. The start of the Miami Beach Handicap will be in full view of the stands.

Should Wise Prince return a winner, his will be the unique honor of having scored on both the main course and over the grass in the same stake. Wise Prince was winner of the 1938 Miami Beach Handicap. The Miami Beach was inaugurated in 1929 and won that year by Fly Hawk. Other victors were Herrick in 1930, Silverdale in 1931, Repentance in 1932, Curacao in 1933, Springsteel in 1934, Larranaga in 1935, Nectarine in 1936 and White Cockade in 1937.

W. Maloney, Her Reign; Townsend B. Martin, Galanas; J. D. Norris, Strolling By; J. D. Norris, Sandy Boot; J. Pepp, No Sir; Mrs. K. Ramsey, Palamede; F. Santiago, Malano; F. Spatola, Wise Prince; Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart, Milk Punch; M. Stuart, Court Scandal; Mrs. B. F. Whitaker, Sickle T.; B. F. Whitaker, Creepy; Woolford Farm, Joe Schenck; Woolford Farm, Robert L.

White Fanned Cobb 7 Times, And Tigers Used Pinch-Hitter

Haight

said that this was the only time during Cobb's playing days at Detroit that a pinchhitter was used for him when he was not injured.

I heard this ancedote of the diamond career of G. Harris (Doc) White from one of his friends and I went to him to verify it yesterday. I cornered him in the gymnasium of the Wilson Teacher's College where he is the physical director now.

"I was rather fortunate with Cobb," said White. "But it was because I was a left-hander. He had trouble with other southpaws, too."

He would not confirm or deny the story of seven straight strikeouts of the greatest all-time player but answered my pleas for some background on his baseball days.

Native Washingtonian

"Doc" White is a native Washingtonian. He was born at Eleventh and E streets southwest and tried his long left arm on a cobble-stone strewn lot next to the iron works in games of "two-knocker." His first team play was for Central High just before the turn of the century and he pitched the Blue and White to the city championship and then moved over to Georgetown University where, in 1899, he was a member of a Hilltop nine, coached by the late Phil King, which won the intercollegiate title.

Both during his high school and college days, young White had visited the local ball park and pitched to the Nationals in batting practice. He never became known as anything but "that skinny kid" and if any of the players or officials ever thought of giving him a contract or a chance, young White never heard of it.

"I'm the new pitcher here," replied young White.

Yanked Into Majors

Whereupon a big hand grabbed White by his coat and yanked him in, sending him sprawling among the players. The man who threw him into the big leagues was Ed Delehanty, one of the game's immortals. Despite the fact that he weighed only 135 pounds and stood 6 feet 1 inch, White threw enough baseball that season to warrant a through trial the following year.

"We had to learn the game the hard way in those days. The manager had more duties than he has now and he was not a pitcher. The older pitchers just didn't give away any secrets to rookies in those days," said White yesterday. "Why I was with the club almost a year before I knew what a 'waste' ball was. I learned to use a change of pace only by watching the older fellows pitch. I noticed that they were using speed on only three out four pitches. So I began to do it and noticed how it crossed up the batter."

The following season brought the "baseball war" and when peace was declared in the Majors, White was signed by the White Sox. He pitched for the Chicago club ten years. In contrast to the big salaries of today, White says that when he was in his prime the league had a salary limit of $2,400 a year!

"Imagine offering Dizzy Dean or Lou Gehrig $50 a week now," said White, probably bemoaning the fact that he was born too soon.

When the sun began to set on his pitching career, White had his first taste of minor league ball. He played two seasons with Los Angels, on the West Coast, and then, with two other veteran players, owned the Dallas Club in the Texas League for a couple of seasons.

1906 Was Thriller

White's most thrilling season was that of 1906 before mentioned. The White Sox came from last place to stage a 19-game winning streak under the leadership of Fielder Jones, and then went on to win the world's championship from the Cubs, who had the Tinker-to-Evans-to-Chance combination at the time. White lost the first game of the series, but held the Cubs safe in a relief role in another and then pitched the White Sox to an 8-3 victory in the deciding game.

"The pitchers nowadays don't get enough competitive work in my estimation. It didn't hurt us in the old days to work almost every day, and I don't see why it should be bad for the present hurlers. In 1907 Big Ed Walsh and I pitched either whole or parts of 116 games on our 154-game schedule," said White.

White pitched against Willie Keeler, elected to baseball's hall of fame the other day; Joe Jackson, Sam Crawford and others who rank high in baseball's all-time batting history.

Despite the fact that "Doc" White is getting some age on him, he looks as if he could burn them down the alley right now. It weighs only a few pounds over the 150 that was his best pitching weight. He was refereeing a basketball game when I sidetracked him into baseball yesterday.

I asked him if, in the spring, he didn't get the urge to throw the old apple. He said he didn't, but in the next breath informed me that the Wilson Teachers were going in for baseball this year in a big way.

"We have a 16-game schedule arranged and we have some good material," he said, with a sparkle in his eyes. I didn't press him on that "never getting the urge" angle, but I'll make you a gold watch with my bare hands if I don't catch "Doc" White pitching to the Wilson Teachers College batters on the first warm day in March.

Generals Host To G.W. Quint At Lexington

Colonials Travel to Lexington Tomorrow; Faris-Pinck Duel Seen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 26.—George Washington University's powerful basketball club, respected as a court power throughout the East, will invade Lexington Saturday to apply a supreme test to Washington and Lee's Blue Comets in a midexamination engagement.

Washington and Lee coaches wert somewhat dubious of their squad's condition for the encounter with the Colonials as practice sessions have been partially suspended during the past week to make leeway for examination schedules. Following the ball game Saturday the docket will be shut down again for a ten-day period until the Comets travel to Danville, Va., for their crucial conference tilt with Wake Forest's league-leading Deacons.

Saturday marks the second journey the vaunted Colonials have made through the Valley of Virginia this month. Earlier in the season they moved into Roanoke and left the brilliant Roanoke College Maroons with a genuine scare, although dropping a 47-41 decision to the Virginians.

Interesting feature of the Lexington contest is the joust between Bob Faris, high-scoring Colonial forward, and Dick Pinck, leading State scorer, who is experiencing a colorful season as a W. and L. sophomore forward.

The Capital City basketers will face the potent fact that the Generals are a superior basketball club on their home court, holding an unblemished record this season in Doremus gymnasium. Strictly a team depending on fast breaks and intricate footwork, the young Generals have found no barricades in spacious Doremus gymnasium, where floor surfaces lend no hardships to pivoting and sharp cutting. On the other hand, the Colonials are defending a record that has brought conquests over some of the Nation's leading ball clubs.

New Insurance In Virginia Up 35% for Month

$85,391,000 for Year Is Within 8% Of 1937 Record

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Virginia agents came within 8 per cent of the 937 record by writing $85,391,000 worth of new life insurance in 1938, and making a better showing than the District of Columbia, Maryland or West Virginia, according to figures of Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau of Hartford, Conn. In December alone Virginia salesmen wrote $11,253,000 in new business, a gain of 35 per cent over the corresponding month in the preceding year.

During 1938 Maryland agents sold $92,209,000 in life insurance, which was 10 per cent under 1937. December's business showed a sharp gain, however, a total of $12,815,000 revealing an advance of 30 per cent over December, 1937. West Virginia, with a year's total of $52,069,000, was 19 per cent behind the previous year, although reporting a 12 per cent gain in December.

December sales in Washington amounted to $9,055,000, an increase of 38 per cent, and the full year's policy total stood at $62,087,000, 16 per cent below the 1937 figure. The December upturn was much greater than expected and presented the finest monthly gain for the entire year.

National Total Dips

Sales volume of $6,358,006,000 for the entire United States in 1938 was 13 per cent under 1937, the Hartford report states. In December the figure for the Nation disclosed a marked upturn of 40 per cent, seven States being 50 per cent above December, 1937. December national volume of $879,886,000 sales was the largest of any one month since December, 1931.

New York State reported a gain of 83 per cent in December over the preceding year. Delaware had the same increase; Massachusetts was up 65 per cent; New Jersey, 60, and New Hampshire, 69 per cent.

Christmas Club Members

District of Columbia Bankers Association announces a slight decrease in the number of subscribers and amounts subscribed for this year's Christmas Savings Clubs operated by local banks. Number of subscribers in the various banks totaled 79,213, a decline of 2.3 per cent from membership in the 1938 clubs. Amount subscribed for the 1939 clubs is $6,713,135, a recession from year of 4.2 per cent.

In last year's clubs, number of members stood at 81,053 and amount subscribed was $7,500,205. Banks made no special efforts to advertise the clubs this year and no interest is paid on these accounts. Some banks will charge the cost of operation to members who do not complete the full year's payments. One bank, which will assess members 50 cents each in such cases, has more new accounts than last year.

Penn Mutual Assets Up

John A. Stevenson, president of Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., organized in 1847, announces that the company ended 1938 with total assets of $702,600,000, representing a gain of $34,500,000 over 1937. During the same period, the company's insurance in force increased $23,250,000 and now reaches the total of $1,951,000,000. The company's present dividend scale will be continued, the amount to be paid as dividends to policyholders during 1939 amounting to $11,400,000.

One of the important factors in enabling the company to continue its present dividend scale was its extremely favorable mortality experience, it is reported, the mortality ratio being the lowest in its history. The company's income during the year was in excess of $118,000,000, and its surplus for mortality and investment fluctuations increased $1,500,000 during the year, this surplus now standing at $30,793,000.

A. I. B. Registers 200

Opening of the second semester of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, this week finds more than 200 students registered and a variety of subjects offered, William H. Laughlin, educational committee chairman, reports. The class in Law 1 will be under the instruction of Bolitha J. Laws, associate justice of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia. Economics 1 will be taught by Norman E. Towson, assistant treasurer, Washington Loan & Trust Co.

Credits 1 will be conducted by Harold E. Burnside, assistant cashier, Riggs National Bank, and Banking 1 will come under Morrison G. Tucker, of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Bank accounting and auditing control will be taught by Ralph Endicott, assistant treasurer, Washington Loan & Trust Co., who was one of the first to complete the courses of the Graduate School of Banking at Rutgers University.

Wilson Reports C. & P. Revenues Gained in 1938

More than $5,500,000 was spent last year for telephone construction in the District of Columbia by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., according to the annual report of the directors submitted by Lloyd B. Wilson, president of the company, at a meeting of the directors yesterday. This brings the total amount spent by the company for construction during the past two years to nearly $12,000,000.

The report showed that operating revenues amounted to $11,379,850, an increase of 2.2 per cent over 1937. Total expenses were $9,297,715, an increase of 2.7 per cent due largely to wages and taxes. Net telephone earnings were $2,082,135 or 4.75 per cent of the average cost of plant in service as compared with 5.13 per cent in 1937.

The number of telephones in service on December 31, 1938, was 239,668, the company having gained 12,711 during the year. Reviewing the progress of the last ten years Mr. Wilson stated that the number of telephones had increased 59 per cent and that Washington is now first among the world's cities in telephone development, with two telephones for every five persons.

The report disclosed that there were 3,439 employes on the company's pay roll at the end of the year, of which 1,938 had ten or more years of service, 456 had 20 years or more and 107 30 or more. The company's plan for employe pensions, disability and death benefits completed its twenty-sixth year of operation and total benefits paid to employes during the year amounted to $159,660.

Wheat Price Advance Cut By Selling

Huge Surpluses and Security Weakness Act As Damper

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—The wheat market worked upward again toward its six months' ceiling but then fell back under the moderate selling by discouraged owners.

Weakness of securities, the improved moisture situation in the Southwest and statistics showing huge mill and elevator stocks as well as record-breaking world surpluses formed a background too bearish to permit an extended upturn.

In early dealings prices worked up ½ cent equal to the best level in three weeks and within fractions of the highest level since early last August. When selling increased, however, the market dropped a full cent and showed only fractional rallies subsequently. September contracts were less susceptible to pressure, with spreaders apparently buying on the basis of normal price relationships between nearby and deferred delivery.

Broker's Loans Rise $6,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $681,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented an increase of $6,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $651,000,000.

Stocks Continue to Feel Effects of Worldwide Fears of Possible War; Government Issues Again Decline

New York, Jan. 26.—The world wide weakening of markets continued today. The decline that was touched off a week ago when holders of securities became disturbed over the threat of a European war and sought to get in a more liquid position took another toll as it forced additional liquidation of poorly margined accounts.

Amsterdam was again a center of the nervous tension, and in foreign exchange dealings the guilder was weak from the opening. It lost a net of 12½ points against the dollar, while other European currencies were soft, but held their declines to minor amounts.

Day Opens Lower

The New York market opened lower and made feeble attempts to rally during the day. Trading was dull and losses were moderate until the final 15 minutes of trading. Then liquidation expanded and the ticker was forced behind in its effort to print quotations.

The composite average showed a decline for the session of 1.29 points, which was enough to carry the list to a new low for the year. Prices are now about where they were last September 29. Among the individual speculative issues, losses of 1 to more than 4 points were common, while in a few cases they were greater, notably in Westinghouse, which fell away 6½ points.

Decline Is Extensive

The steadiness and extent of the decline has amazed Wall Street. It is true that business thus far this month has not come up to the expectations of the first of the year and the possibility of a war abroad no doubt has deterred certain expansions that were contemplated. It is quite possible that, even if the market were ex-war scare, the present level of prices would be justified.

War Fears Magnified

But the steady succession of large breaks, based on the European situation, is making many in the financial district feel that investors are according an unjustified amount of importance to the international bickerings. Even if the worst happens, and that is not certain, it is not going to ruin the United States.

London Tries to Halt Speculation

A factor in the early stages of the present wave of liquidation was the attempts in London to limit speculation. Seeking to limit the speculation against the pound, a committee of the clearing banks in London moved against those who were trading in American securities on margin. The Bank of England kept in the background.

The committee ordered that while trading in American securities should not be halted, no more credit should be extended to purchasers. Their reason was that such purchases facilitated a speculation against sterling. For the foreign purchaser, after putting up a portion of the purchase price, would place his broker in a position where he would have to supply the remaining dollars. This meant sales of sterling to buy dollars.

The move came shortly before settlement day and the British speculators did not know what credit accomodations they would be able to make to carry their American securities. Consequently they had to liquidate a large portion of their margined stock.

Unfortunately, this forced liquidation, which was prompted by the turn of events abroad: the threatened fall of the former capital of the Spanish loyalists and the scheduled declaration of intentions by the rulers of Germany and Italy. Large orders coming down on a thing market produced what we have had to face during the last week.

Business News Optimistic

On the domestic side, the letdown in business has not been surprising, and in most cases it has not exceeded seasonal expectations. A few lines are doing notably better.

United States Steel was again the most active stock traded in and it was one of the chief sufferers, dropping 3⅛. Bethlehem was off 3¼.

Bond Trade Lower

Listed bonds fell sharply today, with little regard to the nature of the obligations. Bewilderment as to recent market performances kept buyers more and more aloof, and prices dropped swiftly on small offerings. United States Treasury bonds led the high grade group downward. In the speculative sections, declines were severe and closings generally at the lows. Foreign dollar issues showed losses to ten points, which affords at least a little indication that apprehension as to external developments lies at the base of the disturbance in American security markets. Turnover today was $7,320,000.

Treasury Issues Dip

Long-term Treasury bonds dipped from 2-32 to 18-32 point, but the larger recessions were noted in inactive issues that dropped from recent highs on single sales. The more indicative bonds were down 3-32 to 5-32 point. Guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations were easy with the direct obligations. Telephone and U. S. Steel debentures were fractionally lower, and other high-grade corporate issues also lost a little ground.

Rail Bonds Generally Down

Among speculative railroad bonds losses ranged from fractions to more than 5 points. Issues of systems like New York Central, Southern Pacific, Illinois Central, Pere Marquette and Southern Railway were weakest. Borderline rails were down only a little, while default rails also were relatively steady. Alleghany Corporation bonds were sold heavily, and small declines appeared among the utility holding issues. Industrial convertibles suffered from declines of related equities. Other special groups also drifted lower.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS.

The Housing Authority of New Orleans will receive sealed bids for the construction and completion of Magnolia Street Housing Project, La. 1-2 comprising 55 dwelling buildings, 1 administration-service building, 2 yard stations, 1 gas meter-house and Local Authority Job Office (the work includes demolition of all existing buildings at site and clearing of the site, construction, and completion of all structures, site improvements, landscape work, heating, plumbing, electric work) until 2 p. m., C. S. T., on the twenty-eighth day of February, 1939, at 226 Carondelet street, New Orleans, Louisiana, and immediately thereafter all bids will be publicly opened and read aloud, in the Commission Council Chamber of the City Hall, New Orleans, La.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish satisfactory performance bond.

Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum wage rates as set forth in the specifications must be paid on this project.

Proposed forms of contract documents, including drawings and specifications, are on file at the office of the Housing Authority of New Orleans at 226 Carondelet street, New Orleans, La.

Copies of the documents may be obtained by depositing $100.00 with the Housing Authority of New Orleans for each set of documents so obtained. The amount of the deposit will be refunded to each person who returns the plans and documents in good condition within 10 days after the opening of bids.

Plans or specifications, proposal forms or bid forms, will be issued only to "General Contractors" licensed by the Louisiana State Licensing Board for "General Contractors," or to an authorized representative of a licensed contractor, and in no event will proposal forms or bid forms be issued later than 24 hours prior to the hour and date set for receiving proposals or bids.

It will be necessary for the bidder to show evidence of license before a proposal form or bid form is issued, in accordance with Act 397 of the Regular Session of 1938 of the Legislature of Louisiana. The rules and regulations of the Louisiana State Licensing Board for "General Contractors" will apply.

The Housing Authority of New Orleans reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive all informalities in bidding.

A certified check or bank draft payable to the Housing Authority of New Orleans, United States Government bonds, or a satisfactory bid bond executed by the bidder and a surety company in an amount equal to 2½ per cent of the bid shall be submitted with each bid.

No bid shall be withdrawn for a period of sixty (60) days subsequent to the opening of bids without the consent of the Housing Authority of New Orleans.

Random Writing:

THE sound is small now, but its volume will grow until the public becomes aware of the fact that the $850,000,000 public health program won't do much for the United States Hospital employes who work for $50 to $70 a month on work-weeks as long as 72 hours. They tell us that the ideals back of the program are high-minded, but they wonder why the ideal shouldn't be applicable to the employes as well as the general public. Their words on the issue will expand.

SINCE the days of prohibition, the stories of still raiders have all but disappeared. But some sprightly ones drift from the field into the Internal Revenue headquarters here, and the other day this came in, which is herewith titled "Unhappy Landing, or Drat Them Revenooers":

Historically, they said, those gentlemen apprehended at illicit whisky stills have denied, disclaimed any business connection with the still. They said they are innocent bystanders, waiting for a street car. Anyhow, down in South Carolina, three mene were arrested at a still. One of them, under questioning, said he had been cutting wood on the other side of the mountain and noticing smoke went to see if his woods weren't on fire. He climbed the ridge to see. The leaves were wet underfoot and he slid down the mountain to terminate, to his surprise, beside the still. Jarred by the fall, he sat down to regain composure and greatly to his surprise the law pounced on him as he perched to a 10-gallon keg of booze. To this story he clung and the Federal judge placed him on probation.

COMMENT at the FCC on reports that Commissioner McNinch will resign from the hot perch: "He is a Scotch Presbyterian and will always see things through."

Burns, of Interior's museum division, is back from Georgia, where he looked over the relics from the Indian mounds in the region and oversaw the finishing touches on Ocmulgee Museum, which will house the relics.

OUR agent at Luray, Va., reports that Wallace Rhodes, the town's photographer, has taken a job with the Federal Trade Commission, depriving the town of his services, which seems a matter that might oe read into the epic of America wherein so many are drifting to the Capital to deprive the towns of their services . . . GOVERNMENT correspondence: From Alaska comes a note to the Acting Collector of Internal Revenue for the Washington District, which holds:

"I am anxious to getthis social security straight. It seems as a farmer there is no way for my wife and I to edge in so we can derive some benefit out of it in our old age, but we have to pay for everybody that does any work for use. . . . I don't mind paying so much as I do the mess we got into over these Indians, and might get in again, some way or other. . . . When word came that we had to get the pedigree of nearly 20 natives and turn it in for S. S., I was away. After trying to learn to talk Indian and visiting all the fish camps until she began to smell like a smoked salmon, now she is afraid of going to the penitentiary for not getting come of the names right. She learned too late that the sontakes the father's first name for his last name . . ." All of which might provide a twentieth century sequel to those Yukon ballads."

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A hand from R. R. would strain credulity if it were not that it came from a commuter game in which strange things often happen. R. R. says:

"Here is one for the book! Four two-suiter hands! But it actually happened on the commuters' train to Long Beach one night last week. Four players and three kibitzers vouch for its authenticity."

Dbl.	4 ♣	Pass	4 ♠
Dbl.	5 ♡	Pass	Pass
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

East was set three tricks.

A stick of dynamite such as this requires delicate handling. West should have gotten an inkling of the situation when, after the opponent opened the bidding, his partner overcalled in hearts. The ominous silence of South also should have warned him. His bid is three diamonds, not three spades.

West's bid of four spades is inexcusable; he surely must wake up to the situation when his partner bids clubs. His only call is four diamonds, keeping the contract as low as possible, with the determination to thereafter remain silent.

Somewhat of an anti-climax, after the previous hand, is today's deal, contributed by B. R. H., which shows how a sacrifice bid turned into a triumph.

The opening lead gave declarer an important clew to the diamond situation, and he was able to draw trump, finesse and run the suit, and discard one of his two losers, winning his small slam contract.

In describing the play, B. R. H. says:

"Here's a hand that worked out well to my enormous surprise as I did not dream my partner would have a good fit in both clubs and diamonds. That was altogether too much to expect. But, after his supporting bid in diamonds, I was pigheaded enough not to want the opponents to play the hand even if I had to go to seven, and at six I was prepared to go down several.

"When spades were not led, and when the queen of diamonds dropped on the first trick, I realized that West probably had the jack of diamonds. We bid them so continuously that he probably thought his partner was void, but, as it happened, it was a very poor lead. The slam was made by discarding dummy's singleton spade on the fifth diamond after the jack was successfully trapped."

Bedtime Story

Reddy Has a Look

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Be careful where you step and how;
What once was safe may not be now.

—Reddy Fox.

The trapper, two of whose Hens had furnished Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy with the best meal they had had since winter and hard times set in, was right in thinking that the one who had stolen those Hens would return. Reddy did return and Mrs. Reddy with him. They returned the very night after the trapper had so carefully set his traps for them.

"It probably will be useless," said Reddy. "Those Hens are shut up at night. But we will lose nothing by having a look. If we could get into that henhouse we wouldn't have to do any more hunting for a couple of days. I had a chicken breakfast, but I could eat a chicken dinner right this minute."

They came up behind the barn where Reddy had eaten that breakfast. Feathers were still scattered there. A few feet away Reddy stopped and studied the ground. "I wouldn't go too near, my dear," said he. "It may be safe but that trapper must have found those feathers. I have a feeling that we better keep away. Anyway there is nothing there but feathers."

So they went wide around those feathers and the two traps so cunningly set there were as useless as if they had been set in plain sight. As they approached the henyard Mrs. Reddy was quick to see that the gate was not closed.

"We will have no trouble getting in there," said she. "Now if only the door of the henyard is open we will be in luck."

"I wonder," said Reddy, sitting down a little way from that gate and looking at it very hard.

Mrs. Reddy also sat down. "What do you wonder?" she asked.

"Why that gate happens to be open just wide enough for one of us to pass through," replied Reddy.

Mrs. Reddy looked at it thoughtfully. "What does it matter as long as it is open?" said she.

"I would feel better about it if it were wider open," replied Reddy.

He moved in nearer and walked back and forth, taking note of every little thing. He didn't know exactly why he suspected that things might not be just as they looked.

Reddy looked at the stick over which he would have to step in order to enter the henyard. It looked as if it had fallen there, but there was no place for it to have fallen from. Reddy suddenly began digging in the snow. He was digging to find out if there was a trap buried just outside. Satisfied that there wasn't he moved in close. For a moment he stood there looking through the opening. Mrs. Reddy watched him. She nodded her head in approval. She knew just what he meant to do.

A moment later he did it. He made a long jump over that stick, through the opening and well into the yard. He trotted over to the henhouse, made sure that there was no way of getting into it, then turned back. As he approached the gate he moved with the greatest care. Then he began to dig in the snow. Almost at once he found what he was looking for. It was a chain. Carefully he uncovered it. He dug under it and slipped a paw under. He lifted. Up came a trap. He flipped it over and when the pan struck the ground the horrid steel jaws came together with a dreadful snap, but they came together on nothing.

Reddy calmly walked through the opening, stepping over the stick. "We'll go hunt somewhere else," said he. Mrs. Reddy agreed.

Fairfax Jury Indicts District Man in Death

Four Other True Bills Returned; Firemen Elect Officers

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST, P. O. BOX 245, Fairfax, Va. Phone Falls Church 2088-M.

A grand jury in Fairfax County Circuit Court yesterday indicted a colored man for murder, two persons for housebreaking and two for receiving stolen goods.

Anthony Sylvester Tripplett, of Washington, was indicted for the murder January 17 of Ledell Chapell, colored, at Belle Haven. Tripplett was captured next day in Washington and, after a brief hearing, was ordered committed to the State hospital for criminal insane at Petersburg by Judge Walter T. McCarthy.

James Emmett Payne, 22, and Grover Deavers, 23, of Lorton, were indicted for breaking and entering the store of Frank Reid, on Ox road, and taking a large quantity of merchandise early this month.

Eustace Payne, father of James Payne, was indicted for receiving and concealing stolen goods, and Mary Deavers, mother of Deavers, was indicted on a charge of receiving and concealing stolen goods. It was charged in the last two indictments that the parents received and hid the goods stolen by their sons.

Opening of court was delayed for more than an hour yesterday morning while workmen hurriedly replaced several large panes of glass blown from the east side of the courtroom by high winds the night before.

Firemen Elect

Herndon—Leonard L. Burger has been elected president of the Herndon Volunteer Fire Department; W. Herman Kephart, vice president; Edwin C. Summers, secretary; A. C. Latham, assistant secretary; H. Arnold Greear, treasurer.

Walter A. Farr was re-elected fire chief for the twelfth consecutive year, with Thomas Groff, first assistant chief; Oscar A. Costello, second assistant chief; L. F. Reed, fire marshal; Leonard L. Burger and Thomas Groff, electricians; W. Herman Kephart, H. Arnold Greear and L. L. Burger, trustees; Culver Gates, captain, and Mark Turner, jr., lieutenant.

Club Holds Dinner

Herndon—The second banquet of the Herndon Athletic Club was held last night in the Eastern Star Hall. Willis McGlincy was in charge of the program. The banquet was served by members of the Eastern Star, headed by a committee composed of Mrs. E. M. Armfield, chairman; Mrs. George R. Bready, Mrs. Bently Harrison, Mrs. William Meyer, Mrs. Calvin Kidwell, Miss Edith Rogers, Mrs. Harold Hanes, Mrs. Rosa Withers, Mrs. R. S. Crippen and Mrs. Allen Bradley.

Committee Heads Named

Vienna—Mrs. John Warnoch Echols, president of the Ayr Hill Garden Club, has named Mrs. James Todd Baldwin chairman of programs for the coming year. At a meeting Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. Eubanks Ruckner, the club will decide on its general program for the coming year. Other committee chairmen named include Mrs. Stephen C. Stuntz, publicity; Mrs. Joseph Berry, membership; Miss Richadetta Gibson, civic improvement; Mrs. Joseph T. J. Davis, ways and means; Mrs. Wirt Ferguson, conservation.

War Mothers to Meet

Falls Church—Mrs. N. N. Nock, of Washington; Mrs. N. L. Williamson and Mrs. Lydia Spofford, of Alexandria, all State or national officers, will attend the meeting of Piedmont Chapter, American War Mothers Monday afternoon at 2 p. m. in the lounge of the State Theater, when plans for the year's work will be considered.

Elder Will Preside

Falls Church—The district presiding elder, Dr. Edgar C. Beery, of Washington, will preside Monday night, when the second quarterly conference of the Southern Methodist Churches of Falls Church, Merrifield and Dunn Loring is held in the parsonage here.

Dr. France, 65, Dies in Sleep; Ex-Senator and G.O.P. Figure

Heart Attack Is Fatal To Marylander Who Tilted With Hoover

By the Associated Press

Port Deposit, Md., Jan. 26.—Joseph Irwin France, former United States Senator who challenged Herbert Hoover for the Presidential nomination in 1932 and was ejected from the Republican National Convention in Chicago in a credentials dispute, died in his sleep last night at Cloverland, his 300-acre estate. He was in his sixty-sixth year.

The death of the colorful physician, gentleman farmer and politician was discovered late this morning by his secretary, Mrs. Catherine Craig, when she went to investigate why he had not come to his office.

Dr. C. I. Benson said Dr. France had died of a heart ailment.

As Maryland's Senator from 1917 to 1923, Dr. France became greatly interested in Russian affairs and in 1927 he married a Russian noblewoman, Princess Tatiana Dechtereva, in Paris.

Figured in Divorce

Their pastoral life on the estate overlooking the banks of the Susquehanna was disrupted in 1931 when the former Senator entered the lists against President Hoover for the party's Presidential nomination.

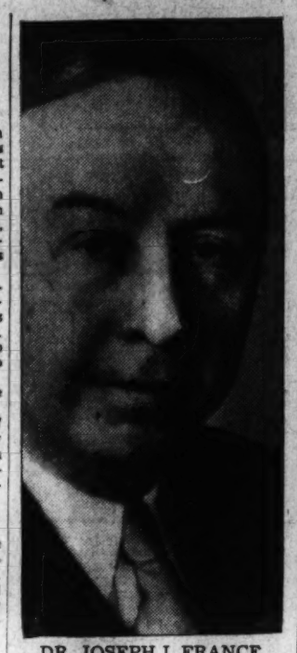
In a divorce action last year, Dr. France contended she had deserted him that year, returning to Paris. Mrs. France opposed the suit on the ground she had gone to France at her husband's request and had become too ill to return earlier.

Mr. France was granted a divorce last July 5 in Elkton but appeals and counter-appeals were pending before the Maryland Court of Appeals, which had set them for hearing January 31.

In her plea for alimony, Mrs. France asserted her husband was the possessor of a $2,000,000 fortune but he contended his property was worth only $200,000, plus $260,000 life insurance. Mrs. France was awarded $300 a month pending a final settlement.

Educated as a physician at Leipzig and the College of Physicians and Surgeons, at Baltimore, he practiced in Baltimore until 1903, when he married Mrs. Evelyn Smith Nebitt Tome, widow of Jacob Tome, philanthropist who founded Tome Institute, at Port Deposit, where France for a time was a teacher.

Entering politics in 1905, he was elected State Senator.



DR. JOSEPH I. FRANCE,

After a five-year retirement, he again became a candidate and was elected to the United States Senate in 1916.

As a Senator, he was one of the early advocates of repeal of prohibition and recognition of the Soviet government.

Bosting of 231 delegates to Hoover's 19 in those States, France was placed in nomination by a Republican delegate. But as he walked to the rostrum, Simeon Fess, national committee chairman, and Bertram Snell, convention chairman, questioned his credentials. In the ensuing uproar, France was escorted by police from the platform.

France said later he had intended to place before the convention the name of Calvin Coolidge, a move he said would have stampeded the delegates away from Hoover.

Prince Georges Farm Bureau Plans Road Bill

Employment of Conviet Labor Included in Draft of Measure

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, 42 University rd., Calvert Hills, Md. Telephone GReenwood 3559.

Employment of convict labor and appointment of a county road manager are included in a bill drafted yesterday at Upper Marlboro by the board of directors and roads committee of the Prince Georges County Farm Bureau.

W. R. C. Connick, president of the bureau, announced the draft would be presented to the Legislature for enactment as soon as details of the appointment of a road engineer had been worked out at a conference with Joseph Chaney, district engineer for the State Roads Commission.

Another provision of the proposed bill includes appointment of a five-man taxpayers' committee from each of the county's 21 election districts to administer road improvements in their respective districts.

The draft also recommends that road allotments to the county, including rebates from the 1½ cent a gallon gas tax, be apportioned among the election districts on the basis of road mileage.

Members of the committee named to confer with District Engineer Chaney include Connick, Hartwell Tucker, George P. Burroughs and William E. Duvall.

Polio Tea February 4

Upper Marlboro.—Mrs. George B. Merrick, chairman of the infantile paralysis drive here, will give a silver tea at her home February 4 from 5 to 7 p. m. Proceeds will be turned over to the President's Birthday Ball committee.

4 Held in Auto Theft

Upper Marlboro.—Four colored men were turned over to Baltimore police yesterday to face automobile theft charges after they had been arrested by Francis A. Richards, newly appointed member of the Prince Georges County police force.

The men, all of Baltimore, were taken into custody after their car had overturned on the Crain highway several miles south of here.

Gov. O'Conor Signs Bill Ending Merit System In Montgomery County; Many to Lose Jobs

Montgomery County Bureau of the Post, 8213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4300.

Repeal of Montgomery County's merit system law for county employes was the first bill signed by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor yesterday and also was the first bill to be enacted by the current session of the General Assembly.

The bill was rushed through the Senate yesterday under suspension of rules as an emergency measure and will become law immediately. The law became effective following its signature yesterday by Gov. O'Conor, President Arthur H. Brice, of the Senate, and Speaker Thomas E. Conlon, of the House. State Senator Robert Peter and Charles C. Jones, leader of the Montgomery County delegation in the House, were among the witnesses.

Jones declared the bill had been enacted to clarify the Montgomery County situation. He said the status of county employes was in doubt while the bill remained law and that repeal of the law clearly settles questions of constitutionality and legality which have been raised against the bill.

With the merit system killed, the way now is clear for the Democratic organization controlled board of county commissioners to begin dismissal of all Republican and Fusion Democratic employes who failed to line up in the November election.

It is expected dismissals will begin at the meeting of the commissioners Tuesday unless a special session is called sooner.

Just how many jobs will be affected is problematical since a number of those who were appointed by the Fusion party, which controlled the county until the new board took over in December, joined the organization forces in the harmony movement which resulted in joining together the anti-organization leaders and the organization forces.

It is probable that the total number of jobs affected will be approximately 50 or 60 although it may reach as many as 100.

Among the more juicy plums to be distributed will be chief of police, clerk to the county commissioners, counsel to the county commissioners, supervisor of county school property and a number of lesser jobs in the clerical and administrative services as well as janitors for the county buildings and schoolhouses and school bus drivers.

Meantime, the leaders of county civic groups were girding on their swords for an intense battle for enaction of a new merit system for the county. Repeal of the old bill was not fought so much by the civic groups as the threat that no new law would succeed the repealed bills.

The merit law was passed by the 1937 session of the General Assembly and has been under fire since it was signed. When introduced in the House the bill carried an effective date as of 1937 but upon insistence of Senator Stedman Prescott, the effective date was changed to 1939 and this date was agreed to by the House delegation and the author, Joseph A. Cantrel.

When the bill was signed by Gov. Harry W. Nice, however, it was found the original 1937 date had been replaced on the bill and it was declared that 1937 was the effective date. A trio of courthouse employes, an organization Democrat, a fusion Democrat and a Republican, joined in seeking an injunction on the grounds that the bill was not legally passed because of the fact that it had not passed the Senate in the form that it was signed.

Denies Flu Caused by Water

Rockville.—Montgomery County Health Officer V. L. Elliott said last night that the epidemic of mild intestinal influenza which has been apparent in Rockville is not due to the water supply of the town.

The health officer said that the disease is not confined to Rockville, but has been spread throughout Maryland, some 600 cases having been reported in Belair and a large number in Frederick and other Maryland communities. Washington health authorities said there was no indication of any spread of epidemic nature in Washington, but that a few cases had been reported.

Women Democrats Nominate

Bethesda.—Mrs. Irene Christopher was nominated for chairman of the Women's Democratic Club of Bethesda, it was announced yesterday. Other officers nominated are Mrs. F. Eliot Middleton, first vice chairman; Mrs. Thomas Lewis, second vice chairman; Mrs. George Glendenin, recording secretary; Mrs. E. G. Bauersfeld, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Harriett J. Garlock, treasurer.

Members of the nominating committee are Mrs. P. H. Royster (chairman), Mrs. Virginia Shaeffer, Mrs. Thomas Peyton, Mrs. Robert D. Hagner and Miss Clara Plager. The election will be held at the February meeting.

Brown Says Boys' Clubs Cut Crime

Holding Police Boys Clubs and other District youth organizations responsible for a drastic reduction in juvenile delinquency in the last four years, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, yesterday outlined the Boys Clubs program to the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton Hotel.

Number of minor criminals arrested for the first ten months of 1938 was only 6, as compared with 354 in 1933, Brown said. The Police Boys Clubs were formed in February, 1934.
